MACDONALD THREATENS TO RESIGN

PREMIER WILL QUIT UNLESS COALITION GROUP COOPERATES

Will Announce Date Of
New Elections On
Wednesday

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Date of the dissolution of the British parliament to make way for a general election will be announced on Wednesday, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald stated in the house of commons today.

The statement was the first official intimation from the premier recognizing the inevitability of new elections in view of the uncertain political situation in this country.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—An inspired statement, indicating Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald's intention of resigning from the national coalition government in the event cooperation between all parties is not forthcoming was issued by sources close to the premier today.

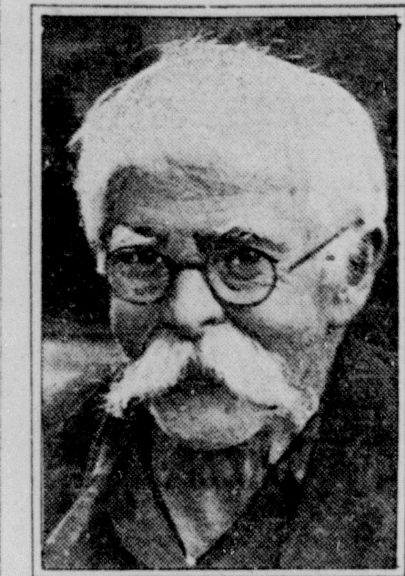

At almost the same time, the Liberal party's advisory committee known as the "Shadow Cabinet" burst a bombshell by voting unanimously against the general election at the present time and reiterating its opposition to a protective tariff.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, stood pat on their demand for an election and a tariff. The wide divergence of opinion made Premier MacDonald's position extremely difficult, and there was widespread speculation over the course he would be forced to take.

"If all parties do not come in to form part of a national unity, the inspired statement declared, 'It is highly probable that Premier MacDonald will find himself in a position in which he would be compelled to tell the country he had found it impossible to obtain national unity a would therefore in those circumstances stand down.'

The statement emphasized that Premier MacDonald has no intention of selling his soul to the conservatives, liberals, or any other party. It pointed out that he might have to appeal for a big united central block which would concentrate upon immediate national needs and ask the nation to give it power to deal with these necessities as they arose.

DRY ASSOCIATIONS PLAN RETALIATORY MOVE AGAINST WETS

Propose To Influence Organizations To Re-
pudiate Wet Stand

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Genuinely alarmed over the powerful national influences that have been thrown against prohibition in recent weeks, the federation of allied dry organizations announced today a program of retaliatory tactics against those organizations that have "gone wet."

Singled out for special attention by the dries are the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, the American Bar Association and the American Medical Association, all of which in convention this year have denounced the Eighteenth Amendment and demanded, at least, modification of the Volstead act.

The dry strategy is to "bore from within" in each of these numerically and politically powerful national associations, with the ultimate object of so mobilizing the dry members that the declarations of opposition to existing dry laws may be repudiated at some future date.

Special drives to fortify and increase the dry elements in each of these great organizations are planned, it was announced by Dr. Ernest C. Cherrington, chairman of the dry group. He contended that the anti-prohibition resolutions in each case had been "put over" by a small but militant minority, who caught the dries unaware and unorganized for resistance.

The majority of the membership of all four organizations, Cherrington said.

Man Ford Lifted From Obscurity, Was Rhythm Master

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 28.—Alanson Mellen Dunham, who captured a nation's heart by the simple old-fashioned melodies he played on his violin, and whom Henry Ford's appreciation first helped to fame, was dead here today at the age of 78. He had been ill for two weeks.

The acclaim of the public and men in high positions came to "Mellie" as he was known, late in life. He had been a snowshoe maker of rare ability in Norway—so skilled, indeed, that Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary took a pair of his shoes with him on the voyage during which he discovered the North Pole. Coming to America, Dunham won an old-time fiddler's contest here, as a result of which Ford invited him to play for him.

Dunham claimed he never took a violin lesson in his life. But he was a master of rhythm.

To the end, when fame shone upon him, he remained simple and unaffected.

THREE FLYERS DEAD AS PLANE CRASHES DOWN

Socially Prominent Physician Victim; Two Others Dead

FONDA, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Dr. R. Bartow Read, 33, of New York, divorced husband of Hope Williams, actress, and two companions were killed when the airplane Dr. Read was piloting crashed into a field six miles from here. Officials investigating the accident today were told the plane had been seen zig-zagging before it fell.

Dr. Samuel S. Ellis, 29, of Buffalo, and his brother Joseph William Ellis, Jr., 24, were the other victims. Dr. Read, who was socially prominent, was a Yale graduate and a member of the Racket and Tennis Club of New York.

Joseph W. Ellis graduated last June from Antioch College, Yellow Springs, where he was considered an efficient and popular student. He left immediately to take a position in the bureau of employment of New York state. He spent five years at Antioch majoring in economics under Prof. Leiserson and worked during his cooperative periods in Dayton, where he lived at the Antioch Club.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Stanley Bateman, youthful flyer was in a hospital today suffering from critical injuries received when an airplane he was piloting crashed to the ground in sight of hundreds near Mitchell Field. Two passengers who accompanied Bateman were killed instantly in the wreck.

The plane went into a spin at an altitude of 200 feet shortly after the take-off. The nose suddenly sank, and Bateman was unable to regain control of the craft.

The victims were Edward Diehl and Charles Lindstrom.

MOTHER GIVES SON TO LAW

Would Permit Sentence For Life To End
Criminal Career Of Youth

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A strange human drama in which a mother, with breaking heart, consented to permit her beloved "black sheep" son to be placed in danger of sentence to prison for life as a fourth offender, was being enacted here today.

Mrs. Margaret Everitt agreed to have her husband, Frank Everitt, sign the complaint charging their 23-year-old son Emmett with stealing the family automobile. Upset by criminal tendencies the boy has shown since he was 15—he has served prison sentences following conviction of grand larceny charges—the parents determined to reform their son even if, under the Baumes law of New York state conviction

LEADING FRENCH STATESMEN RECEIVED BY VON HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—In an atmosphere of friendliness promising greater Franco-German amity than at any time in centuries, the two leading statesmen of France were received by President Paul von Hindenburg today.

M. Pierre Laval, premier of France, and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, apostle of peace and unceasing champion of Franco-German cooperation, spent fifteen minutes with the octogenarian president of the German republic, and came away with what they described as "one of the most pleasant memories" of their lives.

The first French statesmen to pay an official visit to Berlin in more than fifty years, Laval and Briand went directly to the presidential palace from their hotel a

ARCHBISHOP WARNS NATION MUST APPLY GODLY PRINCIPLES

Common Welfare Of Nation Has Claims
Says Prelate

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28.—Business and political leaders today faced a warning from Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O. P., that the country can survive its economic crisis "only by application of the principles of Christian justice."

His message contained the caution that "we shall come out of the present crisis triumphantly if we all unite in God, if every class and every group in the country can be made to appreciate the claims the common welfare of the nation has on us."

Executives, judges and all public officials of whatever political faith "must rise above party considerations to serve the common good," the archbishop said.

The same solution was suggested for employment troubles. "In the language of Pope Plus XI, it is as flagrantly unjust for capital to seize all the profits as it would be for labor to seize all the profits—assuming that labor were in a position to do so."

"The capitalism of tomorrow—there will be no tomorrow unless it is reformed according to moral principles—must be satisfied with a fair return on its investment."

"It should form a corporation and share its surplus with the laborers who produce it and pay tribute, in the form of taxes, to the state that protects it," the archbishop added.

Pointing his nose into a murky, rain-filled sky, the archbishop said he had waited two hours in hope of having fair weather. The giant ship stayed above the clouds throughout the trip and was unreported after leaving Cuyahoga Falls, Akron suburb. She was said to have made a second visit to Cleveland during the trip.

All the time the Akron was in the air, the 250 members of her ground crew worked valiantly to free the giant mooring mast from the mud into which it had become mired during the wait for the take-off. When the ship returned, the work had not yet been completed.

EX-OFFICIAL DIES

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 28.—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Richard Lynch, 60, former Belmont County treasurer and sheriff, who was found dead in bed at his home yesterday. It was announced today, Lynch was in charge of law enforcement in this region during the 1922 coal strike when the militia had to be utilized following a fatal riot.

STUDENT RIOT MOBS FOREIGN MINISTER; DENOUNCE POLICIES

Dr. Wang Injured; Anti- Jap Rioting Occurs In Cities

NANKING, Sept. 28.—A riotous mob of 5,000 students, protesting China's policy of non-resistance in Manchuria, today attacked and seriously injured Dr. C. T. Wang, foreign minister of the Chinese Nationalist government.

Wang was mobbed at his office after the students had paraded the streets, demanding war against Japan, and denouncing the foreign minister because of his failure to secure intervention by the League of Nations in Manchuria.

Wang, who is 59 years old, tried to placate the leaders of the mob, but they rushed upon him, striking him with their fists, clubs and stones, smashing his spectacles and inflicting injuries upon his head and body.

Three of Wang's personal servants and half a dozen foreign office guards finally rushed into the fray and saved Wang's life by carrying him from his office to the residence of President Chiang Kai-Shek.

The students continued to wreck furniture and break windows at the foreign office, and shouted demands that Wang should be removed from office.

PEIPING, Sept. 28.—Shouting "down with Japan," hundreds of Chinese students paraded through the legation quarter today, but adequate police protection prevented any violent outbreaks.

Similar anti-Japanese demonstrations were reported at Canton, where the population observed a three-minute period of silence as a protest against alleged Japanese atrocities in Manchuria.

In Hong Kong, Chinese mobs continued attacks against Japanese shopkeepers, according to advices received here, with British troops aiding the police in efforts to restore order.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Dispatches from Hong Kong today said that a "state of emergency" had been declared there following several days of anti-Japanese rioting in which at least six Japanese were killed.

Two British destroyers have moved up to a position near the wharves to protect the Japanese steamship Asama Maru, on which a number of Japanese residents of Hong Kong have taken refuge.

AKRON, O., Sept. 28.—Eager to take the air again, the giant U. S. S. Akron, world's largest airship, tugged impatiently at her massive mooring mast in a brisk September breeze here today while preparations were underway to take the ship on her fourth test flight, possibly today.

After considerable difficulty was experienced in freeing the seventy-five-ton mobile mast from the sticky Akron airport mud in order to negotiate a landing, the Akron was brought back to earth again last night from a three and a half hour trip, her third in five days.

Governor George White of Ohio, was one of the passengers aboard the navy's new queen of the skies on her third trip during which she received her first baptism of rain.

The Akron was left outside her hangar last night for the first time. It was announced today's flight might start as early as 5 o'clock.

Pointing her nose into a murky, rain-filled sky, the archbishop said he had waited two hours in hope of having fair weather. The giant ship stayed above the clouds throughout the trip and was unreported after leaving Cuyahoga Falls, Akron suburb. She was said to have made a second visit to Cleveland during the trip.

START DISBARMENT
AGAINST ATTORNEY

URBANA, O., Sept. 28.—Hearing of disbarment proceedings against Prosecuting Attorney William Marvin Vance of Champaign County were to be held here today before Common Pleas Judge Frank Cleveland of Wilmington, appointed to the case by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall.

The disbarment proceedings were brought against Vance by the Champaign County Bar Association, which charged the prosecuting attorney with misconduct in office and unprofessional conduct as a lawyer.

Among the specifications listed against Vance was one that while representing Grayce Andrews in an attempt to get a settlement from Earl M. Andrews of Tiffin, her former husband, he threatened Andrews with prosecution for perjury and was instrumental in procuring an unlawful indictment against Andrews.

NORWAY, EGYPT AND SWEDEN FOLLOWING ACTION OF BRITAIN

United States And France Face Money Isolation

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Following the lead of Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Egypt were off the gold standard today as new problems arising from changing monetary values caused serious concern to the governments of Denmark, Finland, Greece and the Irish Free State.

Unless something is done quickly, America and France run the risk of finding themselves sitting high and dry on bags of cornered gold amounting to nearly three-fourths of the world's total supply, sitting in splendid financial isolation. The belief exists here that within a short time only the United States, France, Holland and Czechoslovakia and Poland, whose currencies are linked with the French, will be operating on a gold basis.

Irish currency being linked with the British pound, when Great Britain went off the gold standard Ireland also suspended gold payments. Irish currency in fact was never based on gold but was backed only by Irish treasury notes based on British government securities.

The 1929 currency act was amended to permit the use of American securities, also, as backing but few were acquired. Inasmuch as ninety-three percent of Irish exports go to Great Britain it is argued that Irish trade would suffer disastrous losses if the Free State went on the dollar standard.

The collapse of the gold standard in the Scandinavian countries was partially attributed to the depreciation of the British pound, due to the close trade and financial relations between Norway, Sweden, and England, and also to the recent failure of Sweden to obtain new sustaining credits in the United States and France.

The government of both Norway and Sweden prohibited the exporting of gold, and in Sweden the national bank raised its discount rate from 6 to 8 per cent.

The action of Norway and Sweden in suspending the gold standard had immediate repercussions in Danish and Finnish financial circles, with both the governments of Denmark and Finland taking steps today to deal with anticipated depreciation in their national currencies.

While these events were taking place in northern Europe, dispatches from Cairo announced that the Egyptian government had decided to prohibit the exportation of gold, the dropping of the gold standard in Egypt. Increases in a number of import duties were also proposed because of the decline in the value of the English pound compared with gold-supported currencies.

Greece was also having acute money troubles, the government issuing a decree drastically regulating the purchase and sale of gold, and placing all foreign currency operations exclusively in the hands of the Banque de Greece.

The bank raised its discount rate to 12 per cent as a further protection, and Greek cabinet officials declared that all possible measures would be taken to maintain the integrity of the national currency.

Meanwhile in Ireland officials of the Irish Free State were contending with a movement for a break in the fiscal relations between the Free State and England, and for the conversion of a 6,000,000-pound Free State credit in London into American dollars.

Such a plan would give the Free State a gold standard independent of England, but strong opposition was voiced by President Cosgrave, who argued that the gold standard so long as a financial policy is maintained by the British government.

DEATH-BED STORY LINKS GUN USER

OTTAWA, O., Sept. 28.—A death-bed statement made by Frank Conway, Sugar Creek Twp. constable, may be introduced today as evidence in the case of Daniel Hunt, charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Leon Moebock, a farmer.

Moebock was slain and Conway was fatally wounded on the Moebock farm as they attempted to route gold thieves from the fields.

Shortly before his death and in the presence of ambulance drivers who were rushing him to a hospital for an operation, Conway identified Hunt, according to officials, as the man with whom he and Moebock had engaged in the fatal gun battle.

Hunt pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned Friday. The arraignment was continued until today so that evidence might be introduced.

EX-LEGISLATOR DIES

Where Two Died When Buildings Fell

At least two persons were trapped and crushed to death when two old-fashioned apartment buildings in West Philadelphia collapsed early the other morning. The victims had no time to escape from under the crumbling walls and went to their fate. This general view of the ruins shows firemen searching for bodies. Right depicts Clara Bell, 24-year-old waitress, who was struck by falling debris, being removed in a serious condition from the buildings' ruins by rescuers.

DO-X All Dry and Snooty

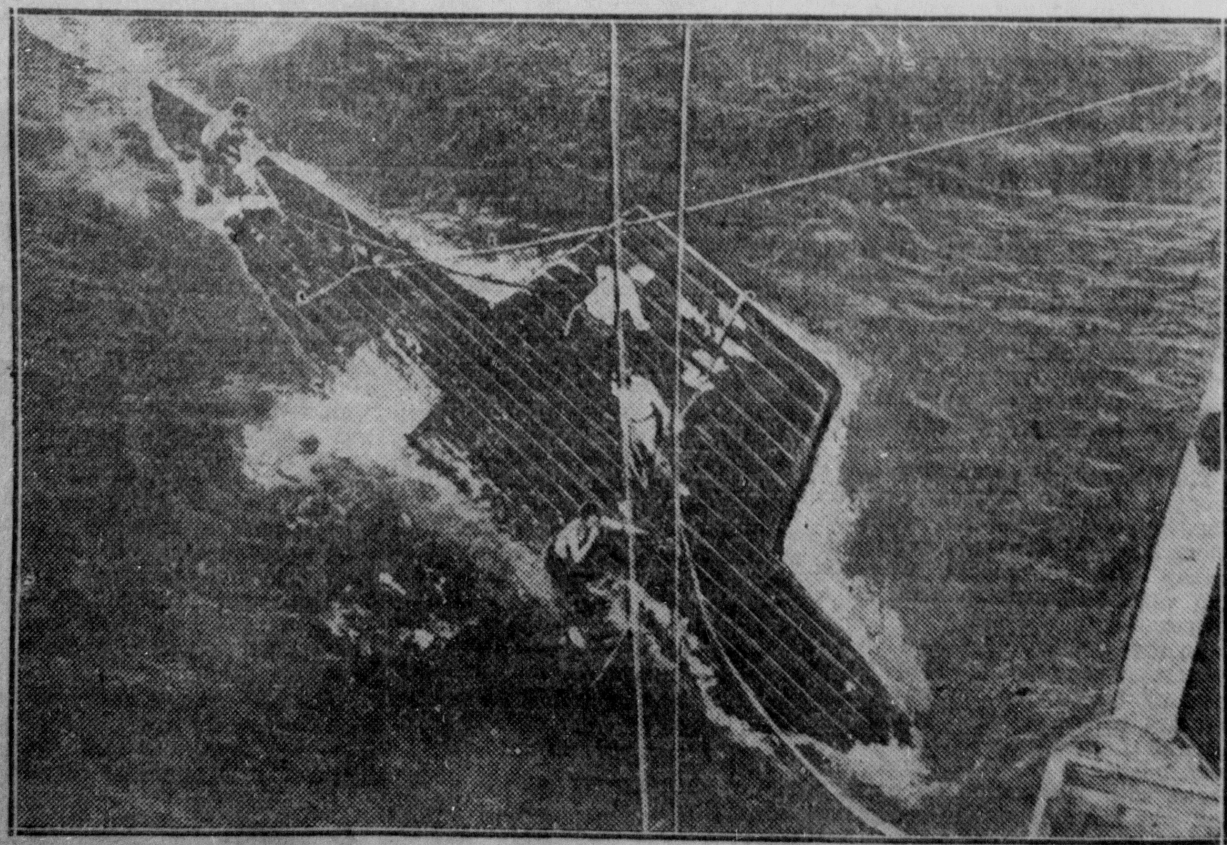

This unusual view of the giant DO-X, largest heavier-than-air craft in the world, makes the German flying boat appear to be sticking its nose up in the air with all the snootiness which its class permits. High and very dry, the DO-X is undergoing repairs at North Beach Airport, New York, before its return flight to Germany. The DO-X is drier than many craft out of water, since the bar of the Dornier plane has been closed during its stay within the American 12-mile limit.

Where Japs Are in Control

This map clearly indicates the strategic points held by Japanese troops in the warfare waged against Chinese soldiers in Manchuria. The city of Mukden, ancient capital of Manchuria, was taken in the first Japanese offensive. The perpendicular lines running up to Changchun and Kirin indicate the territory taken over by Nippon troops. Tsingtao on the Yellow Sea, was the scene of a landing party of Japanese soldiers, who extended their control along the railroad as the lines show.

Thrilling Rescue of Flyers at Sea

It is getting to be a frequent occurrence for the tortoise to lend a helping hand to the hare, these days. Rescues of flyers at sea by the slower and safer water craft have become so common that they are no longer regarded as a novelty. The picture above shows one such rescue when the survivors of the Spanish Dornier-Wal military plane were hoisted aboard the liner Saturnia after they had crashed in the Mediterranean Sea. The photo was made from the rescuing craft and shows the men on the wing of their wrecked plane. The flyers were all high officials in the Spanish Army.

Peace Offering

As a peace offering to the Vatican and a sacrifice on the altar of the present accord between Premier Mussolini and the Pope, Il Duce has arranged for the "resignation" of Major Giovanni Giurati (above), secretary of the Fascist party and guiding spirit of 3,000,000 Black Shirts. The Pope, in turn, has removed a priest from power who has been antagonistic to Fascism. Both human "peace offerings" have been active in the Church-State controversy.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldst thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?—Ezra, ix, 14.

THRILL OF FOOTBALL

Baseball may be considered the national game of the United States, but nothing seems to thrill a crowd quite so much to its depths, as a game between champion football teams. Of course the short season and the relatively small number of football games has something to do with that high pitch of excitement.

It is complained that football is not so easy to watch as baseball, that the ball disappears in a wriggling knot of players, and you can't tell where it is until the knot unties. Perhaps this mystery of the game only makes the spectators more intent and excited, as they peer into the quirming mass of players.

Parents worry more or less about the sprained joints and strained muscles that result from this hard physical clash. While a good many boys are hurt, the number of serious injuries is not so large. The chances of such injury to the boy on the football field may be less than the chances which he runs when he operates the family automobile day after day.

Educators often complain that their students throw themselves into the football maelstrom so thoroughly that real study becomes a secondary matter. Any school or college which permits any of its athletes to slip through on inferior standing simply encourages such neglect. If participation in football is made absolutely dependent on excellence of scholarship, the permanent interests of the athlete should not suffer.

Football may take too much of a boy's interest, but what would he be doing without it? Boys of the type that make good athletes can get into a peck of trouble if they have no outlet for their energy. They are better off putting the ball than they are roaming the roads of Ohio in search of adventure.

THE STAFF OF LIFE

How far is the surplus of wheat that can't be sold at a fair price, due to food fads? The wheat growers who are worrying about low prices should look into this question. It may take a lot of advertising to bring back their staple to full popularity. Certain it is that many young women and girls, and some older ones too, have conceived the idea that they are more beautiful if they can reduce their weight.

Many of them limit themselves on wheat bread, which they seem to think is a fattening food. Many of these youngsters, who to a sensible eye seem to have a perfectly wholesome and healthy figure, are worrying about their weight. They have resolved to knock off another five or ten pounds by a starvation diet. Perhaps they have conceived the notion that the boys like light weight dancing partners better, and they would sacrifice a good deal of physical well being if they could be sure of partners at the dances.

In many families the amount of bread eaten has been reduced. Many sit down to dinners consisting mostly of meats, salads, vegetables, and deserts, with bread omitted. Yet bread has always been called the staff of life. One can't help thinking that many of these people will suffer.

Bread has been a leading reliance of the human race for food from the earliest times. There is practically no waste in it, it is completely digested, and it gives a large amount of nutrition for the money.

The girls who go slow on this food should consider that an appearance of health is the finest kind of beauty. While they may reduce their weight by cutting out substantial foods like bread, they are also likely to make themselves pale and colorless.

THE CONVENTION

The Big Parade has passed. The pavements that resounded with the music of marching feet from noon until after dark at Detroit, Michigan, recently are silent again, but in the ears of a million spectators still rings the rattle of drums and blare of trumpets that enlivened the spectacle staged by the American Legion.

Whether there were 100,000 or only 85,000 men and women in line does not greatly matter. A long time is likely to elapse before anyone again sees so many representatives of so many parts of the Union passing in review. Six thousand came from Massachusetts alone. The mills and mines of the industrial East, the cotton fields and peach and citrus orchards of the South, the "Skookum" country, the wheat and corn fields of the Great American Plain poured into the parade their various samples of Americanhood. The eye grew tired attempting to keep pace with the diversity of the panorama unrolled before it; but the heart beat faster when an Illinois band struck up "Old Kentucky," or an Ohio unit swung by to the air of "Michigan, My Michigan." There was the unity of sentiment that backgrounds the Nation's racial heterogeneity.

The Big Parade gave those who watched it a lesson in ethnology, as well as one in geography. The banners bearing the names of cities and towns that rarely make the front page were not more different than the "types" that marched behind them. A notable contrast was provided by the Arkansas delegation and the delegations from industrial centers. All the men from Arkansas, and all the girls in its stunning "Smile Band," could easily have been mistaken for members of a single family. They looked alike. The men and women from sections of the country that have experienced a larger infiltration of recent immigrants did not look alike. They were as diverse in stature and face as the countries from which they have so recently been translated. Yet all were Americans, all marching behind the same flag in what might be called a parade of the nations, a personification of "e pluribus unum."

The Big Parade has passed but it will linger long in the minds of those who were privileged to see it, a spectacle and an inspiration. As darkness fell upon the marchers, thousands turned back to their vocations with a quickened feeling that America is safe.

HAS WHIP HAND

An examination of the present financial condition of Great Britain and Japan leads the Brookings Institution to the conclusion that the United States will hold the whip hand at the Geneva disarmament conference next winter, as far as the limitation of naval armament is concerned.

The idea that the financial ability of the United States to outbuild Great Britain and Japan will enable it to force them to meet its views on naval reduction is not convincing. Ability to build, without the inclination to do so, will never get this country anywhere. The United States has the money to give it the place on the seas to which it is entitled, which would make its shores immune to attack from abroad; but it also has a rich harvest of pacifists, who howl down any suggestion that it ought to build up at least to the strength permitted it by the London agreement.

Great Britain and Japan cannot be whipped into line by the display of bulging pockets, whose contents they know very well, the pacifists will do their best to prevent the United States from devoting to adequate naval defense. Ships talk. Talk about ships there is so little likelihood we shall ever build doesn't.

Whatever else you think about the way things are going in Great Britain, you must admit that the islanders are keeping stiff upper lips.

THE VACANT CHAIRS

Two hundred odd Gold Star Mothers and war widows give a solemn note to the crossing. Whenever the sea kicks up a bit vacancies begin to appear in the starboard deck chairs; some of them have had an unpleasant time of it.

But on the other hand, some of the whitest-haired ladies have sung "Over There" and "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" lustily while frail youngsters were beating hasty retreat from shuffleboard games.

Every berth aboard is taken. In our cabin are two Mormon missionaries, a couple of twenty-year-olds, and a young man who has been in the service since the summer of 1918. They are all in the service of the United States.

LAGGING OF THE OCEAN TIDES

Owing to the rapid rotation of the earth, and the irregular contour of the shore lines and ocean floors, the tides do not manifest themselves immediately under the disturbing influence of the moon, but follow along after they have had time to get under way. The mean time intervening between the meridian over a given shore line, and the flood tide at that point is known as the "establishment of the port." The time between the passage of the moon and the arrival of flood tide varies, but the mean time is found. At New York City the mean interval is 8 hours 13 minutes.

Night dispatching of planes at Night Airport, Los Angeles, is done with an ingenious device consisting of two lamps attached to cords long enough to reach the end of any of the five runways. One lamp is green, signaling "take off" and the other red, signaling "wait." Increased night flying activities made some such dispatching device necessary.

MANCHURIA REGARDED LOST TO CHINA NOW AS JAPAN MOVES IN

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEW YORK.—Whatever American diplomacy may think of Japan's latest policy in Manchuria, American financiers with interests in the Orient are uneasy.

The Japanese appear to financial interests as showing convincing signs of a too long pre-arranged plan to be lightly turned aside by a League of Nations' warning. The disturbance which must ensue if the Japanese proceed with what seems to be their present program has possibilities it is difficult to estimate.

Congressman Ernest Gibson of Vermont, who recently returned from a tour of the Far East, brought with him accounts of very ominous internal conditions in Japan—of a thoroughly discontented people and many evidences of threatened revolutionary developments.

If so serious a situation exists, the suggestion is made here that a governmental move to consolidate national sentiment by the stirring up of enthusiasm in some foreign enterprise would not be surprising, especially considering that Tokyo has coveted Manchuria for years and getting it while allaying domestic dissatisfaction simultaneously would be killing two birds with the same stone.

Whether or not there is truth in Japanese complaints of Chinese acts of aggression against the Japanese-controlled South Manchurian railroad is deemed unimportant. Such acts, it is believed here, could have been stopped and even punished without proceeding with so extensive a military occupation of the country had it not been deliberately intended to grab and hold it permanently at the first good excuse, which perhaps was furnished by irresponsible Chinese elements.

The theory that Japanese military influence has predominated in disregard of the civil administration, that the failure of such means as League of Nations' representations and protest under the Kellogg treaty to prevent it would be convincing proof of their worthlessness.

From China much effervescence, but not much action, is anticipated. Manchuria is believed here to be lost to her unless foreign interposition results effectively.

Tokio's accounts that Japan does not desire the territory as its climate is unsuitable for Japanese colonization, are not seriously taken. It's soil is rich; its mineral resources large; its labor supply cheap and adequate, and Japan is well known to have desired it for a generation as a source of raw material for her factories if not as an overflow field for her surplus population.

To diplomatic representatives from League of Nations and other sources, it is foreseen that Tokyo will make conciliatory replies, but ultimately the prediction is general that she will continue to occupy Manchuria unless Russia offers forcible objection. This is exactly what is expected to occur as soon as Moscow becomes convinced of its unavoidability.

Of Russia's strength under communism there is great uncertainty, but anyway, it is agreed that a Russo-Japanese clash would be far more serious than one between the Japanese and Chinese—so serious, in fact, that the failure of such means as League of Nations' representations and protest under the Kellogg treaty to prevent it would be convincing proof of their worthlessness.

In writing these agencies, since they are non-profit making institutions, it would be a courteous thing to do, to send a letter enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Those who write me for a personal reply would be very considerate if they would be so kind as to enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. For one person to address and stamp one letter is not much of a burden, but to address and stamp hundreds of them become costly. Whereas I have said I should not answer a letter not properly sent, I do not have the heart to neglect any of them.

Southern Baked Ham

Candied Sweet Potatoes

Succotash

Apple Sauce

Quartered Tomatoes on Lettuce

Lemon Meringue Pie

Coffee

This menu will serve four adults

Today's Recipes

Southern Baked Ham.—Center slice ham two inches thick, three-fourths cup brown sugar, two tablespoons dry mustard, milk to cover. Have butcher score fat around ham. Combine sugar and mustard, add enough milk to make smooth paste. Rub into both sides of ham. Cover with milk. Bake in hot oven half hour, reduce to moderate oven two hours.

Suggestions

Making Coffee

The thing to watch in making good coffee is to retain the aroma and flavor. If hot or boiling water is used the process is shortened and therefore the flavor has less chance to escape. Good percolated coffee may be made with cold water. The important precaution, when using either boiling or cold, is to have fresh water. Let the water run until the water no longer tastes flat. Then add it cold to the percolator and your coffee will be reasonably good. Some people who take special pains with their coffee bring this freshly-drawn water barely to a boil, then add it to the percolator in which the coffee has first been placed. Using fresh, freshly-drawn water more nearly approximates filtered or drip coffee, by which method it is generally conceded that the most flavor is extracted from the coffee. As for convenience, the stale, hot water from the faucet would be the quickest way to make coffee, but the flavor would be indifferent. Next in speed would be to draw the fresh, cold water, quickly boil it, put the coffee in the percolator at the right moment, immediately add the boiling or hot water, then let it percolate two to five minutes.

Today's Recipes

Cucumber and Pineapple Salad.—One tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, one cup cucumber, one cup canned sliced pineapple, one-fourth cup boiling water, one-fourth cup sugar, one-fourth cup mild vinegar, two-thirds cup pineapple juice, few grains salt. Soften gelatin in cold water. Chop cucumber and pineapple fine. Dissolve gelatin with boiling water, adding sugar and stirring until both are dissolved. Stir into pineapple and cucumber and add remaining ingredients. Turn a small amount of the jelly into molds which have been greased or rinsed with cold water. Allow this to partially congeal. Cover with a layer of cantaloupe balls and in turn cover them with a layer of jelly. Let this set, then arrange over the top a layer of seedless grapes. Let the jelly set over them and next use a layer of seedless grapes. Let the remainder of jelly and chill until firm. Of course any combination of fruit flavors may be used.

Breakfast For Reducer Is Hearty

By LOGAN CLENDENINE, M. D.

The fundamental principles of a sane reducing diet, we said yesterday, were:

1. System; 2. balance; 3. measurement. So let us start with breakfast.

Half a Cantaloupe

Prepared Rice

Poached Egg on

Whole Wheat Toast

One pat of Butter

One slice of Toast

Glass of Milk

"Why, that's a good breakfast," you say, "enough for anybody. More than I usually eat."

But wait a minute. Let us remember Number 3, measurement. How much of each of these? And another thing, let us remember system. This is breakfast and there is to be nothing between now and lunch—no sampling of crackers. And only breakfast, lunch and supper. No candy at 4 p. m. No midnight lunch before going to bed—"so I can sleep."

If you are going to reduce sanely you must know the amounts of your food portions. The best way, of course, is by weighing on scales. But you can measure the dimensions of food portions and come pretty close. The Detroit Dairy and Food Council (910 Stephenson building), publish an interesting series of colored pictures of food portions, actual size, which can be laid out for reducing diets, diabetic diets, etc., and give an accurate idea of the size, weight and measurement of each article. This breakfast is taken from their list. The half cantaloupe is four inches in diameter. It weighs 130 grams, or 4½ ounces. It has 33 calories. It contains 8-10 grams of protein, no fat, 7½ grams of carbohydrate, small amounts of calcium, phosphorus and iron, and vitamins A, B and C. On the basis of acid-alkaline balance it has 9.9-10 excess on the alkaline side. Its roughage value is 2.1-10 grams of fibre.

The rice is half a cup (10 grams, or 1-3 ounce), 35 calories; protein, 8-8.5 grams; no fat; carbohydrate, 7.9-10; contains calcium, iron and phosphorus; 9-10 excess acid; negligible roughage.

The poached egg weighs 50 grams, the toast 30 (both together 3 ounces). Measurements, 3½ by 3½ by ½ an inch, 148 calories. Protein, 9.6-10 grams; fat, 5½ grams; carbohydrate, 14.9-10 grams; calcium, sulphur, phosphorus and iron; vitamins A and B; excess acid, 7.7-10; one-half gram of fibre.

Milk: One glass, 7 ounces, or 200 grams; 138 calories; protein, 6.6-10 grams; fat, 8 grams; carbohydrate, 10 grams; calcium, phosphorus and iron. If raw it contains vitamins A, B and C; if pasteurized, A and B with possibly some C and D. Excess alkalinity, 3.6-10.

Butter: 10 grams, or 1-3 ounce; square 1¼ by 1¼ by 1-3 inch; 77 calories; protein, 1.0 gram; fat, 8.4 grams; small quantities of calcium, iron and phosphorus; vitamin A. Neutral in reaction.

Small slice of toast: 3½ by 3½ by ¼ inch. Weight, 15 grams, or ½ ounce; 40 calories; protein, 1½ grams; carbohydrate, 7.7-10 grams; excess acid, 1.

Total calories for breakfast 471. Balance: Protein, 49.3-50 grams; fat, 22 grams; carbohydrate, 48 grams.

All vitamins present. Minerals present, especially the important ones, calcium, phosphorus and iron. Fibre or bulk present.

Hubby Is Chronic Philanderer

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been married 15 years and my husband has been a philanderer all these years.

"I suffer mental torture when I find he has been having another affair, and still I can't give him up. He is mean and petty when he takes us out, which is about once every two weeks, but when he is out with others I know he is liberal.

"What shall I do? I no sooner break him off with one than he is on with another. I have been away from him twice and he has always sought my company. For the sake of my child I have returned.

"I am very suspicious, and at times probably have accused him of wrong doing without cause. But he has made me do so. I simply cannot trust him. Still I feel that I love him, or can't I be love? He has a good position and if it were found out that he does not lead a moral life I'm sure it would mean his disgrace and perhaps loss of position.

If you still love your husband after 15 years of mental torture because of his philandering, you probably can go on, H. L.

There are men who seem constitutionally unable to keep from having these affairs with women. Other men drink or are chronically bad tempered or miserly and keep their families half starved.

Some wives realize that these affairs are of a passing character, and their need and love of their man and knowledge of his fundamental need of them, makes them stick, in spite of the anguish and humiliation to which they are subjected.

If you are one of these women there is no use my telling you to divorce your husband. You would be miserable away from him and feel that your life had been ruined because you care so deeply.

If, however, you feel you could reconstruct your life alone and be happy without suffering as you do now from his affairs, there is no reason why you should stay with a man who has demonstrated his inability to be true.

Possibly your unfounded accusations make him feel that as "he has the name, he will have the game."

WORRIED MARIE: It is pretty hard to break up these young friendships, Marie. They usually have to wear themselves out.

Don't worry too much about your little sister going with this girl who has a bad reputation. If you scold and say things against her friend your sister will naturally stand up for her. Invite girls and boys you do approve of to the house, and plan that with her so that she is thrown with a desirable class of young people. Maybe after while she will see the contrast between them and this other girl.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I guess 'Bill,' whose letter appeared in a recent issue of your paper wasn't taking any chances that his pursuing lady friend would miss seeing his appeal, for I received a copy of the paper of that date.

"At first I thought I was meant for THE GIRL, but she was described as a young girl, so that eliminated me. If you had all the cards in this drama of real life, Virginia, you probably wouldn't call me such a poor sport.

"Bill needs" a very strong feeling. I think, Miss Lee, that the spending proposition between boys and girls is very equally divided. So often we don't know both sides, and it is difficult to express an unbiased opinion when we know only one.

"I love Bill well enough that I can do without him. I hope his best girl will always be fine.

"M. C."

If you really are the "pursuing lady" mentioned in Bill's letter, my dear M. C., my hat is off to you as a fine sport. Not one word of reproach for the very broad hint Bill gave you.

or someone who thought they were working in his interest—or their own—gave you.

Rage Will Burn Up Fat

By GLADYS GLAD

According to the recent statement of a group of our scientists, there's nothing like a series of good, lusty outbursts of rage for reducing excess weight. The emotions of anger and fear, it seems, both burn up fat. And a tantrum or two a day helps to keep those plump curves at bay.

However, I don't believe that I'd advise an girl to get into the habit of losing her temper merely in order to lose weight. Her fits of temper may indeed burn up her excess fat. But they'd probably also burn up her associates. And what's more, fear and anger are two emotions that have the mean habit of etching most unattractive lines and wrinkles on the face.

There's no percentage in attempting to acquire figure beauty at the sacrifice of facial loveliness. And a wan, deified look certainly doesn't add beauty to a female's face. But there are a number of women who complain that when they attempt to reduce their waists always become thin, haggard and wrinkled.

It is not necessary to sacrifice the soft, youthful contours of the face when trying to lose weight. But the reducing method employed must be a good one. A well-balanced reducing course such as the one outlined in my booklet on "The New Figure," for instance, should not have any such effect. It is when too-quick reduction is effected that the face usually becomes thin and drawn. For the skin which had stretched to accommodate the fat beneath it, does not date the fat beneath it, does not have time to adjust itself to the change of contour when the fat is dissolved too quickly. And so it sags in wrinkled looseness.

If you wish to preserve the youthful contours of your face while you are reducing, make sure your reducing routine is a well-directed one. Then, if you obey the following injunctions, you should not find yourself losing beauty as well as pounds.

First, do not start on your daily water intake. Consume at least 10 to 12 glasses each day, so that your tissues do not shrivel through lack of fluid.

Second, use a good nourishing cream on your face nightly. Cocoa butter is an excellent one. Warm it to an oil and pat it into the skin nightly before you retire.

And third, make frequent use of a good astringent or bracing lotion to stimulate the circulation in the face, and to keep the pores closed and the facial contours firm and smooth.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Sterilizing

Helen: To sterilize your brush and comb, dip them in a solution of formalin. One teaspoonful of the formalin to a pint of water is sufficient.

Gooseflesh

Mrs. K: When taking your nightly bath, scrub your legs with a bland soap, using a small flesh brush. After the bath, massage your legs with cold cream or pure olive oil.

Brown Spots

J. B. K: To remove the brown spots, apply a solution of hyposulphite of soda and water, one part of the chemical to eight parts of water. Moles should be removed by a competent skin specialist.

Cocoa Butter

Dottie B: The cocoa butter may be purchased in cake form in any drug store. It should be warmed to an oil before it is applied.

Has Xenia Central High a football following? Is night football destined to prove popular with local fans?

The answer to both of these questions is decidedly in the affirmative.

It was conservatively estimated that more than 800 persons, un-mindful of the driving rain that swept Cox Athletic Field preceding and during the first half of the Xenia-Washington C. H. game Friday night, viewed the damp proceedings.

Gate receipts totalled $342, according to a report of O. B. Bogart, faculty manager of athletics, the revenue being greater than that derived from any daylight high school football contest played here in many years.

Imagine how great the attendance would have been could the first night football game have been attended by more propitious weather conditions. Receipts would have been at least twice and perhaps three times as great.

The receipts included $145 from the sale of season tickets and $43.25 from the disposal of 200 student tickets to Washington C. H. students at 25 cents each.

Favored by more auspicious weather, it is freely predicted that an all-time attendance record should be established two weeks hence when Xenia Central plays its next home game at night. Wilmington High will be the Bucanear gridiron foe Friday, October 9, and the fans will turn out in large numbers. Of that there is little doubt.

For the first time in recent years, Xenia has inaugurated a football season with a victory. The margin over Washington was only 2-0, the two eleven being about evenly matched on the muddy gridiron, but then the Bucs deserved to win that game. The Blue Lions recovered their share of fumbles, but they did not have a single scoring chance. Howard Thompson, with his long and accurate punting, kept the play almost continually deep in Washington territory. Xenia made its own breaks by charging through twice and blocking kicks. The Bucs were deprived of a touchdown when an untimely penalty ruined this prospect. The playing conditions were too terrible for either team to show to advantage, and what the verdict would have been, had the field been dry, is problematical.

Notwithstanding the trying conditions, the Bucs recovered their spirit. The line charged like it meant it, the tackling was not so much of the pants-slapping school and the team served notice it will be strong defensively.

While the kicking of Thompson was the most noteworthy feature (one of his boots traveling sixty yards across the goal line) individual performance of a few other players commanded special attention.

Carl Smith, center, handled the wet ball like it was dry as the Sahara. His passes to the Bucanear backs were almost unerring in their accuracy. Andy Frazer and Everett Hall, the big tackles, charged and tackled like nobody's business, and Andy, besides his ordinary duties, made a hobby of running around, looking for and covering stray fumbles. "Mysterious Mo" Hymen revealed himself as a thoroughly capable end. Dick Creamer, defensive quarterback, ran back punts like he was an old hand at the racket. Freddie Dalton backed up the line well and tackled fiercely, while Bill Wagner indicated, that if given a dry field, he will gain plenty of yardage this fall for dear old Xenia.

The Bucs emerged from the mud and water in much better physical shape than the Blue Lions, most of whom went around afterward limp and nursing minor injuries.

The triumph, meager as it was, broke the spell Washington has exerted over Xenia for the last three seasons. Xenia now has won ten games, lost eleven and tied one with Washington teams since 1911.

MERCHANTS DEFEAT OSBORN IN HITTING CONTEST ON SUNDAY

Xenia Nine Survives In County Tourney; Score Is 14 to 12

Xenia Merchants won their way into the finals of the Greene County baseball elimination series by outlasting the Osborn Fulton Fords to win, 14 to 12, in a slugger bee at Washington Park Sunday afternoon.

The series finals will begin next Sunday with the Yellow Springs Athletics facing the Merchants on the local diamond. A three-game series will be played.

With every player hitting safely at least once, and all but one obtaining two or more safe drives, the Merchants collected a grand total of twenty-three hits off two Osborn pitchers. Osborn made only eight hits, but seven errors and six bases on balls issued by "Cherokee Joe" Lamb, Xenia hurler, aided the cause of the visitors. Wantz and Eber did the flinging for Osborn.

Durnbaugh and "Jug" Conley divided batting honors for Xenia, each getting four singles. The Merchants executed two knappy double plays. Sipe and Glosser each contributed two hits for Osborn.

The contest, one of the most dramatic affairs of the season, took more than two and one-half hours to complete and was replete with dramatic good and mediocre baseball. Xenia scored in every inning but three, and Osborn tallied runs in the last seven innings. The Merchants were never behind, however.

The triumph was Xenia's second over Osborn in the current series. The previous victory was by a score of 3 to 1.

SPYING ON SPORTS

By William Ritt

Central Press Sports Editor Horace Greeley, the late editor who was so free with his advice, might have changed one word in that quip of his: "Go west, young man," and still have rated as an A-1 dispenser of lucrative tips.

Horace could have said "old man" instead of young and he could have given his advice to Connie Mack. Anyway, Connie went west three times this year, and, as a result, has his third straight American League title sewed up tight.

It was in the west this year that Connie reaped his reward. The east did its best to give the Athletics a nice berth around third or fourth place, but the west bent the humble knee and acclaimed Connie king.

Here are the figures: Against eastern opposition (New York, Washington and Boston) the Mackmen have won thirty-five games and lost twenty-five. This is a percentage of .583.

Against western opposition (Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis) the Athletics have won sixty-two and lost but seventeen. That's a percentage of .783.

Against eastern opposition the A's did not do quite as well as winning two out of the three games, but playing the west the Philadelphia club did better than three out of four.

To add to the luck of the A's was the manner in which these same western clubs played against Washington and New York. Connie's most feared pennant rivals.

Though bowing in abject humility to the might of the Mackmen the Indians routed house Washington, coping two out of three games with neither team met.

The Cleveland club has won two more games from the New Yorks than the Yanks have been able to win from them.

Detroit, able to win but three games from the A's, slapped the Senators six times and the Yankees eight times. Chicago, also zailing but three decisions against Philadelphia has taken seven from Washington and four from New York.

The case of the Cardinals in the National League somewhat resembles that of the Athletics—but isn't such a drastic picture of weakness in the west.

St. Louis has been able to break a little better than even against New York, Brooklyn and Boston, but has swamped the Phillies.

However, Pittsburgh alone in the west has been able to give the Cards anything resembling an even fight. Chicago shows a six-game deficit with the Cards. Cincinnati has been able to win but two of her seventeen games with the champions.

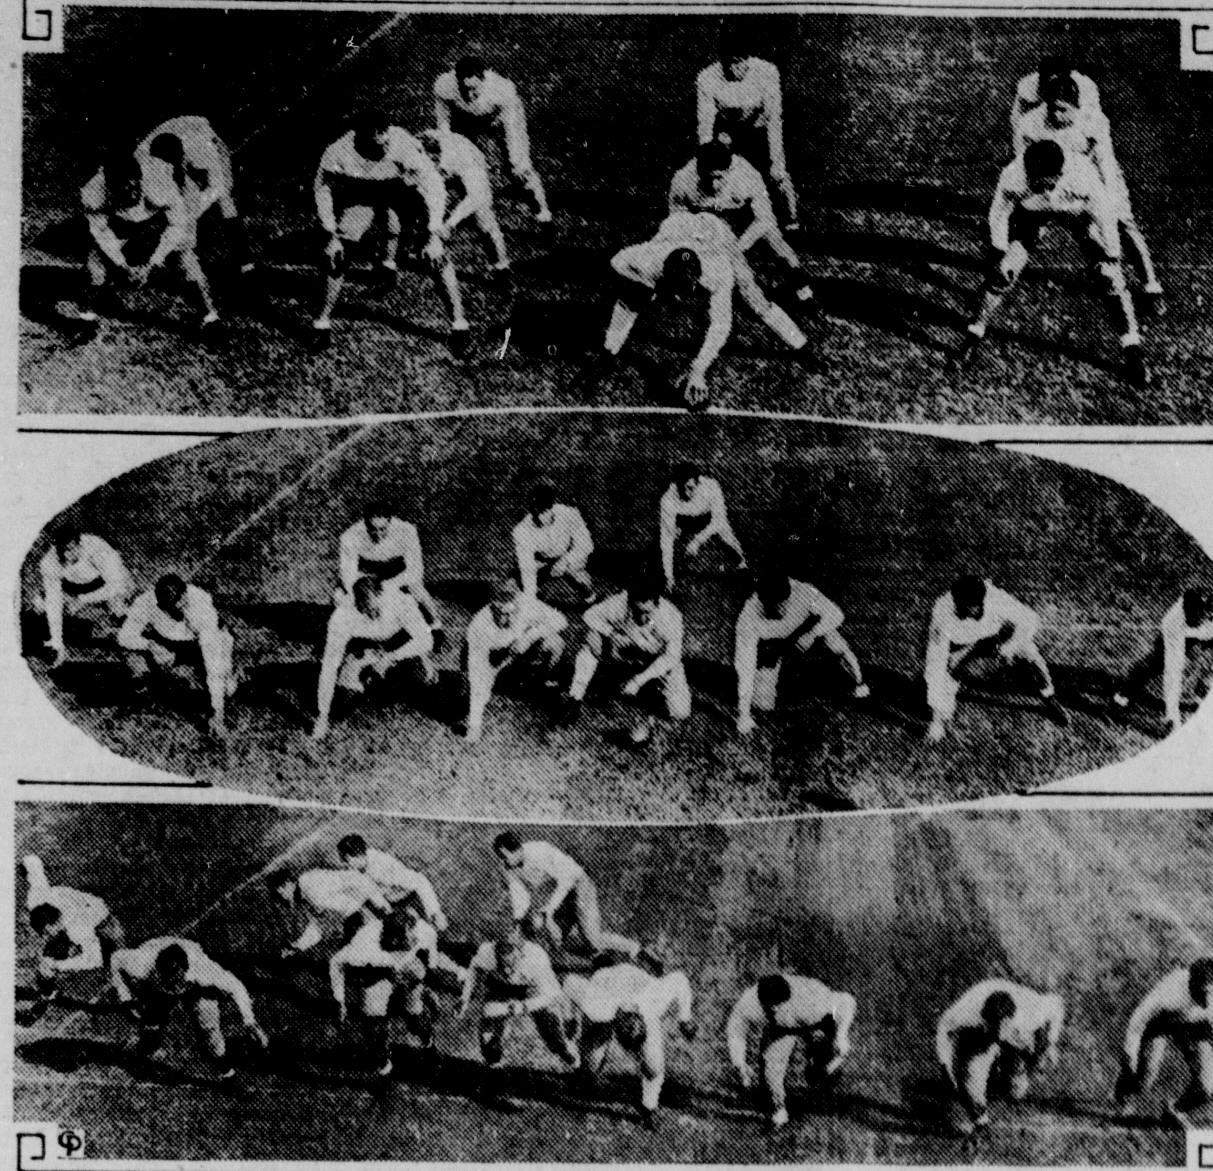

St. Louis has won forty-three games and lost but twenty against the west. That's playing .682 baseball. The east has given the Cardinals forty-seven wins and twenty-nine losses. That's .632.

LOOKOUT FOR ILLINOIS; BOB ZUPPKE OFFERS NO COMPLAINTS

By LEO FISCHER
International News Service Sports Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 25.—When Bob Zuppke says he hasn't any complaints to name, it's time for big ten schools to look out.

With a smile as big as some of his new lineups, the "Little Giant" is going about the task of preparing his nineteenth Illinois football team, which without question, will be the "dark horse" of 1931. Things are looking up around here, and anyone inclined to feel that Illinois will again be a doormat for the big ten, is far away from the truth.

After a couple of mighty lean years, the Illini are now sitting in the golden seat. Few have "doped" the Orange and Blue to cut much of a figure in this year's race, but Zuppke's aggregation is in the spot to wreck the whole parade.

Believe it or not, but the Coach himself doesn't know all his 1931 regulars yet by name. Nine, or possibly even ten, will be new men—recruits from last year's freshman squad. Before it's over, there is a big possibility that all eleven regulars will be from the sophomore ranks.

Illinois is the mystery team of the race. It may not win all its games, but it will win a good share of them, and if the sophomores come through as expected, the eleven will be in the thick of the title fight all the way.

Zuppke has a way with all sophomore teams. The last time he had such an aggregation to work with, he steered them into two successive big ten titles. This was in 1927 and 1928. In 1929 he came within a game of making it three in a row. The most of one men departed and the hard times came on. Now it's his turn to get back into the sun once more, and if you could see the happy smile with which Zuppke surveys his squad, you'd believe him when he says that he's really happy with such a fine bunch of men.

Zuppke's "happiness" begins when he looks over his new line candidates his first stringers will average close to 190 pounds—something he hasn't had since the days of Crane, Gordon, Weitz, Nowak, et al. Only at the ends are his veterans being given consideration, and this merely because "Red" Owen and Mark Swanson have had a bit more experience.

Zuppke's switch to the sophomore means that he's willing to gamble. He hasn't much to lose, for last year's varsity, with the few exceptions already cited, were all moved total loss, and wouldn't be much better this year, as a result, this is about the way the Illini "dark horse" will take the field Oct. 3 in their opener with St. Louis University.

Swanson (173) and Schustek (182), ends; Hulink (192) and Glick (207), tackles; Jensen (175), or Pratt (190), and Gorenstein (206), guards; Straw (170), center; Hoyer (159), quarterback; Berry (179) and Walker (167), halfbacks; Cook (200), fullback.

Few of these names sound familiar right now, but before November 21st, you'll have heard plenty about them.

HOME CADETS SCORE VICTORY IN OPENER WITH SHARONVILLE

Captain Yowell Leads Mates To Triumph By 19 To 6 Count

Scoring two of the three touchdowns, one on a seventy-five-yard jaunt after intercepting a pass in the fourth period, Warren Yowell, cadet quarterback and captain, personally conducted the O. S. and S. O. Home football eleven to a 19 to 6 victory over Sharonville High School in the season's opener on the Home gridiron Saturday afternoon.

Yowell plunged through center for the first score in the second quarter. Wolfe missed the try for extra point.

In the third quarter a punt blocked by Rowe, right guard, gave the cadet griders the ball on Sharonville's nineteen-yard stripe, and Halfback Blair lugged the pigskin over for another touchdown soon afterward. He received a pass for the extra point.

A forward passing attack paved the way for the visiting team's lone touchdown in the last five minutes of play. Elix, end, caught an aerial and stepped over the goal line. Try for point failed. Sharonville renewed its overhead offense in the closing moments, hoping to tie the score, but one of the heavens went awry and was intercepted by Captain Yowell, who sprinted three-quarters of the length of the field for a third touchdown.

Passes netted the visitors 167 yards and accounted for their four first downs. The cadets recorded eight first downs and their total yardage was much greater than their opponents.

The cadets will entertain Bath Twp. High's eleven from Osborn next Friday afternoon. Lineups and summary:

KLAN WILL OPPOSE INTER-MARRIAGES

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—With a word of reprimand for Dr. Herbert A. Miller, the ousted Ohio State University Sociology Professor, and communists in Barberton and Cleveland, the Ohio Ku Klux Klan today launched a campaign to make racial inter-marriage illegal. Wearing full regalia, 2000 Klansmen paraded yesterday to a local high school, where they discussed their three-year program, which they hope to bring about by legislation.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Sept. 28.—Accused of flying while drunk Don C. Leepston, 29-year-old aviator, was in jail today. He is charged with having terrorized hundreds of bathers on the beach with reckless flying. While attempting to land, Swepton is alleged to have crashed his plane into an oil derrick guy wire.

AVIATOR JAILED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The youthful Henry L. Stevens, national commander of the American Legion, and his predecessor, Ralph T. O'Neill, came to the capital today to pay the Legion's respects to President Hoover and to invite the executive to speak over a nationwide hookup of radio stations on Armistice Day.

Farm Notes

AFFECTS CHILDREN'S CHOICE OF VOCATION

Ohio's future farmers are being recruited largely from farm families that have had more than average success in agriculture. A study made by P. G. Beck of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the Ohio Experiment Station, of 1275 rural families, indicates that the group of families which had the largest business had almost three times as many of their male children in agriculture as the group of families with the smallest farm business.

Farm reader girls who become farmers' wives were most frequently girls who had a number of younger brothers and sisters. They were the girls who had served the longest apprenticeship on the home farm, assisting their mothers with the farm household duties and in the care of the younger children.

Thus, a selective process appears to be in operation, the children with the most training and experience in successful farming and homemaking tending to remain in agriculture more frequently than those with less experience and training.

TIME OF PICKING DELICIOUS AND STAYMAN

The time of picking Delicious and Stayman apples is of very great practical importance. F. S. Howlett, associate in Horticulture at the Ohio Experiment Station, makes the following suggestions as to time of picking these varieties.

It is very desirable that Delicious fruits develop high color and high sugar content if high quality is to be obtained. Good quality is impossible if the fruits are picked in an immature condition. However, Delicious fruits have a tendency to water core if left on the tree too long. Although a small amount of water core will usually disappear later, any considerable amount is very undesirable and indicates that the fruits are over-mature. The ground color of the fruit at picking time should be a greenish yellow. At this time the fruit will separate readily from the spurs.

Fruits of Delicious should be placed in cold storage at once if long keeping quality is to be assured, as this variety softens and becomes mealy with extreme rapidity at the high temperatures rather common during harvesting time. In common storages in which Delicious are being kept every effort should be made to run the storage very efficiently and carefully so that full advantage is taken of the cool nights.

Stayman Winesap is also a variety upon which high over color and maturity is desirable. Green Stayman Winesaps are unattractive and if placed in cold storage while the ground color is still quite green they will likely scald rather badly. At picking time the ground color should have as much yellow as green. Even then the fruits may scald unless oiled paper is used in the containers. The Stayman fruits should pick readily from the spurs and should be of good color. If left on the tree too long, considerable water core may develop.

It should be remembered that even a few degrees make a considerable difference in the rate of softening and ripening in a common storage. There are very few common storages where more attention to temperatures inside and out and to proper time of closing and opening the intakes of air will not produce even a few degrees cooler air temperatures within.

CHAPTER 48
NATALIE SCREAMED as a rough hand reached toward her. "Shut up!" said the man, taking another step in her direction, bringing him so close she could smell liquor.

She backed away from him and stumbled over a root, falling on the sand. Carlton Woods did not try to assist her. He did not move, and he had not said a word.

Natalie scrambled to her feet and wondered at Carlton's complacency. The man eyed Carlton sharply, then.

"What d'ya mean snooping around here?" he barked. "You're not that dumb!"

"We weren't snooping," put in Natalie in a trembling voice. "We were just—just walking on the beach and my friend—"

"Shut up!" he said again. "You're probably trying to cover him."

A feeling of helplessness swept over Natalie and she realized that Carlton Woods felt as powerless to do anything as she did.

"You don't understand . . . you . . . we can explain it all," Natalie's voice sounded weak and strangely absurd. Her hands went to her head fearfully.

There she was, in a skin-tight bathing suit, with more of her body, all of which was damp and cold now, exposed than covered.

Her arms folded across the snug fit of the bodice of the Jersey suit. She hugged about her as to ward off his stare which roved boldly over her figure.

She shouldn't be so frightened. She trembled trying to still her gasping breath. She wanted terribly to scream.

Looking up over, eh?" said the gruff voice. "Whose spotters are you?"

"No—we can explain . . ." put in Carlton, whose nervousness by this time equalled Natalie's.

Carlton had towered over Natalie as they walked along the beach but a few minutes before. He seemed strong and powerful, his muscles, under the satin-smooth sun-browned skin of his shoulders had impressed Natalie. He walked with his chin up and his eyes out.

But now he was helpless and cowed. Although he was taller than the other he was completely dominated by the presence of such brutality.

"Yeah," sneeringly, "you can explain! I betcha can! You'll have a chance."

"We were just walking along here . . . and it was so warm we just thought we'd come over here in the shade and—" Natalie could tell by his expression that he was not thinking of what she said.

"Come along, now. We'll just salt you two down for a while."

The rum guard moved toward her. He was half smiling. His eyes traveled slowly over her.

She took a step backward and fell against a tree. She shuddered. Wasn't Carlton Woods going to do anything?

She looked at him. Terror was in his eyes, and sympathy.

"What's your name?" the man asked Natalie.

Her face twisted and she was afraid she could not speak.

"Why—what are you . . . what do you mean?" she managed, with the most self-control she had ever shown in her life.

"Carey, eh?" he said, the half smile, half sneer, still on his features. "Don't want to tell me. Come on. Out with it. 'What's your name?'"

Natalie knew she must tell him something. Something that would make him leave her alone, let her go, let Carlton Woods go. Her brain was not functioning properly. She was cold and could not stop shivering.

"I guess you won't talk now—but I reckon we can find a way to make you . . . anyway, you ain't leavin' here . . . you know too much."

It was plain, what he meant. It was his way of guarding the stock of liquor stacked high under the rain-beaten tarpaulins.

He was breaking the law, having the liquor. He would stop at nothing to protect himself.

All the stories she had read in recent newspapers about the way these outlaws tortured their victims flashed in a terrifying panorama through her mind. Why had she left Allyn's house?

"Oh, it is, is it!" the bleary eyes turned to him for a second. "But you can't do anything to us—we're innocent! Really, we are . . ."

"Really! How strange, indeed! Well, I'll tell you what you can do—you can tell that to the chief. Try and make him believe it!" His face twitched with cruelty.

Natalie always had thought men somehow found a way to defend themselves. As the thought came to her Carlton stepped toward the overbearing man, who was standing too near Natalie.

As quick as a flash the man stepped aside and a gun was in his hand. He had had it in his pocket all the time.

"No funny business from you," said the voice behind the evil looking snub-nosed automatic. "Or—well, use your imagination." His threads of decayed teeth were bared.

Carlton paled despite his sun-brown. Natalie felt paralyzed, her heart had stopped beating.

The man stuck the gun back into his hip pocket ominously.

The great expanse of bleached sand on one side and the even, silvery water on the other mocked them. They were imprisoned under the shade of this clump of trees at the foot of a dune.

A motor boat put-putted past noisily. It seemed so easy to scream out to the man standing in the boat, Natalie thought. But the man in the cap thought of that, too.

He said, "Wouldn't do you any good, sugar, to try out your vocal chords on him—he's one of us. He's one of the boys that you wuz talking about . . . that fishes up the stuff out of the bay at night."

The man in the boat looked over toward them and seemed to think nothing about seeing the three standing in the shade. He put-putted along out of sight.

Natalie couldn't take her eyes from the guard's evil face so near hers but she backed a little way from him as he came nearer. He reached out and caught her wrist and pulled her toward him.

"Don't be so scared of me, sugar. I might bite you, but I won't hurt you." He would have put his mouth to her bare shoulder if she had not pulled away suddenly.

She pulled, but he still held to her wrist.

"Cute as a kitten, ain't you," he said, a yellowish tint coming in his eyes. "The chief'll like you. Say, he's popular with the girls, too."

As he pulled her against him there was a noise. A man's voice called: "What's all this?" It came from the direction of the tent.

They saw a tall, lean man coming through the flapped opening in the tent. He wore a dinky undershirt and dark trousers. He took long steps over to the group.

It seemed that Natalie's heart would break with gratefulness.

"What's the idea?" asked the newcomer, looking knowingly at the bleary-eyed man.

John Crawford, former resident of Greene County, died Saturday night at his home in Tulsa, Texas, according to word received by D. L. Crawford, W. Church St., his brother.

Miss Martha Crawford, W. Market St., a sister, had been with her brother at Tulsa during his latest illness and she will arrive in Xenia with the remains Wednesday morning. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Cherniavsky's Music Is Popular Radio Feature

By MILDRED MASON

JOSEF CHERNIAVSKY and his sympho-synco-paters — an unusual dance orchestra — are proving a musical sensation at Cincinnati's Hotel Gibson roof garden and likewise, are proving a sensation over the air through stations WLW and WSAI ever night.

As its name indicates this popular radio group dispenses music of both symphonic and ultra modern character with equal facility. Cherniavsky's forte, however, lies in his genius for bringing to the works of the classical masters a delightful novel touch of modern syncopation and, in turn, for lifting current dance hits into the realm of the light classical.

Cherniavsky, a Russian symphony orchestra cellist who became enamored of American jazz on arriving in this country several years ago, was musical director of Universal sound pictures before coming to Cincinnati. While in Hollywood he created the musical scores for a number of popular talkies including "Show Boat."

Historical Event On Air.

The first steps in the restoration of Fort Necessity, the scene of George Washington's first battle against the French and Indians on July 3, 1754, will be heard by radio listeners Tuesday from 4 to 4:30 p. m. over an NBC-WJZ network. Ground breaking will be under the supervision of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission and U. S. Senator Sol Bloom and Brigadier General Douglas McArthur will be the principal speakers.

Fort Necessity is located near Uniontown, Pa. Stations to carry the program are not listed.

Feature French Star.

Odette Myrtil, French musical comedy star, will feature a new series of programs with the "Gay tees Orchestra" to be inaugurated Tuesday over an NBC network. The program will be on the air from 6:15 to 6:30 p. m. through station WKCY, Covington. The French star has been a favorite figure in the theatrical world for years. She came to America in 1915 and appeared in Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolics.

War Scene On Air.

"A Stranger in the Mill," dramatized adventure with the scenes laid in the Russian retreat on the eastern front during the late war will be the feature of the "Thrillers" program over an NBC network Tuesday evening. This program will be heard through station WSAI, Cincinnati, from 9 to 9:30 o'clock.

To Sing Ballads.

Two ballads, "Loves Like a God-bud," by Oley Speaks, and "Rose Touched the Rose," by Brown, will be sung by the Welsh tenor of the air, Melville Ray, during the Werk Bubble Blowers program Tuesday evening. "Hink and Dink, radios black-face minstrel end men, will add variety to the program through WLW at 8:30 o'clock.

The Theater

Motion picture people are orderly folk, according to Charles C. Blair, chief of police in Beverly Hills, where many of the screen celebrities have their homes.

As for wild parties, it is a rare occasion, he says, when the police have to call anyone and ask them to quiet down. More often a couple of dress suit officers are sent up to guard the party against possible hold-up. If the gathering is a large one, other patrolmen are assigned to watch the grounds.

Beverly Hills probably is the most strictly policed town in the world. Its four square miles are guarded by forty officers, working in three eight-hour shifts. They have any given spot in their beat

Marie Dressler has shown such rapid improvement during the last week that her doctor is allowing her to make a three-weeks trip to New York. Claire Du Brey, who has been the star's faithful companion during her illness, will be her traveling companion. Three producers are after Gilbert Roland since he got a job as Jane Cowl's leading man in "Camille." Incidentally Miss Cowl is requiring that a special Pullman be put on the Daylight Limited from San Francisco so that she can have a drawing room. Edward Everett Horton is back in Hollywood after a six weeks vacation at Lake George, in New York. Carole Lombard was back at the Studio last week for the first time in three months. Her physician allowed her to take a test but insists she must stay in bed from sixteen to eighteen hours out of every twenty-four.

once an hour. And if a film star is going out of town, the officers make a circle of the premises, trying windows and doors to see that no intruders have entered.

To cut down the number of solicitors bothering the stars, Chief Blair requires all house-to-house salesmen to get police permits. When they make application, they also have to undergo finger-printing. Ten days are then allowed to see if the applicant has a criminal record. On a number of occasions this has proven to be the case. Chief Blair believes many daylight burglaries have been prevented by this precaution.

Another service given the stars is the hiring of watchmen. Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Jack Warner and many other film people engage private watchmen through the police department. Blair says a loiterer can't stop in one place ten minutes without being questioned by a policeman.

After a quite summer Tony Bushnell is engaged to play in Pola Negri's new picture, "A Woman Commands." This tall English husband of Zelma O'Neal is well liked around the film colony and is one of its best golfers. He and Zelma have taken Charles Farrell's house in Toluca Lake since Charlie moved in with Virginia. Reginald Owen also is in the Negri picture.

DRY ASSOCIATIONS PLAN RETALIATORY MOVE AGAINST WETS

ton said, are in favor of prohibition, but have been intimidated or have been steam-rollered by their leaders.

"It is self-evident," he said, "that the action taken by the Legion delegates is not representative of the whole body of Legionnaires, but was rather practically the expression of merely personal opinion by a small percentage of those who were mustered into the service. The great body of these ex-soldiers who have not found opportunity for expression will be reached by special endeavors by these (dry) organizations which are fighting today's battle against alcoholism and against the liquor enemies of the constitution."

Similarly, he said, special campaigns will be directed toward "the hundreds of thousands of members of labor unions whose support of prohibition is being ignored by professional labor leaders."

And as for the legal and medical associations, Cherrington asserted: "The lawyers of the country who support the 18th amendment will be especially appealed to under a practical plan which will enable these sworn officers of the courts to regard seriously their oaths to support the constitution."

"Members of the medical fraternity will be given special attention in the plans for the 1932 campaign. The fact that a majority of the physicians of the country do not avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain permits for the medical use of liquor is one of the most significant indications of the attitude of the medical profession toward the question of intoxicating beverages."

Although the American Legion was not singled out above the bar association, medical association, and the federation of labor, it was the Legion's action that spurred the drys into action. The dry leaders, as do others, recognize that the Legion is politically the most powerful influence operating around the halls of congress, as evidenced by the almost complete sweep which the Legion has made of its program since the war. Even presidential vetoes have been overridden with impunity at a nod from Legion leaders.

With the ex-soldiers coming along in step with the doctors, the lawyers, and organized labor in the country, the allied dry leaders believe the time has come when something must be done.

MAN FROZEN "DEAD" TELLS EXPERIENCE WITH COLD WEATHER

WHEATON, Ill., Sept. 23.—The late Sir Reginald Barkin, credited with having been "frozen into unconsciousness and recovered," has at least one equal in this world, Olenius Olson, a merchant-tailor here.

Sir Reginald who died Sept. 10 at Bryngwran, England, only recovered from one "death" while the Wheaton man has two to his credit.

Olson's second experience with death was during the winter of 1880 when he was 18. At that time he started out with a party from his farm home in Wernand province, Sweden, to Christiania, Norway, to sell some farm products.

The temperature dropped to thirty degrees below zero, and the members of the party were forced to walk in order to keep from freezing to death, according to Olson. In recalling this "death" Olson said that the last he remembered was that he clung to the sled thinking it an awful dream but believing that he would wake up beside a warm fire.

The next morning he regained consciousness beside a warm fire. His companions were cutting his frozen clothing from his body and he was stiff as a board. Olson recalls how his companions rubbed him with snow and how his body ached every time he was touched.

Olson said he recovered without losing a finger or toe two months after his "death."

The first "death" was three years before when he was pulled from a lake and revived by artificial respiration.

STATE DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION SPEAKS ON OSBORN PROGRAM

Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education, delivered the principal address when the $180,000 new addition to the Bath Twp. consolidated school building was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies at Osborn Sunday afternoon.

The program began with an orchestra prelude by the high school orchestra under the direction of Harry Smith, director. A Masonic chorus offered several numbers and brief talks were given by George Walker, of the firm of Walker and Norwick, Dayton architects for the building; H. R. Armstrong, president of the township school board; George Warner, representing the P. T. A., and the Rev. J. W. Young, of the Osborn-Fairfield Rotary Club. The school building was thrown open for public inspection between 1 and 6 p. m.

The school building now contains forty-one rooms for class instruction. The school will accommodate 1,500 pupils, and fifty teachers. At present there are 1,041 pupils enrolled taught by thirty-six teachers. With the expenditure of approximately $180,000 for erection of the new addition last summer, the total cost of the school plant, built six years ago, is placed at $400,000. Two bonds issues financed the construction. R. J. Warner is township school superintendent and H. K. Baker is principal of the high school.

1931 Wonder Year for McPhersons, Entire Family Bowd to Cupid

Aimee Semple McPherson's Marriage, Following Those of Her Two Children and Her Mother, Is Fourth in Famous Evangelist's Family in Less Than Twelve Months.

MA KENNEDY and REV. R. G. HUDSON • MR. and MRS. DAVID C. HUTTON • MR. and MRS. RALPH McPHERSON

The marriage of the famous apostle of Angelus Temple, Aimee Semple McPherson, to her 250-pound voice instructor, David Hutton, whom she had chosen for the role of Pharaoh in her latest religious opera, is the fourth wedding in the noted evangelist's family in 1931. The epidemic of marriages began last March with the wedding at Singapore of Roberta, Aimee's daughter, to the 23-year-old pursuer of the liner President Wilson, on which the McPhersons made a world tour. Next came the "surprise marriage" of Aimee's mother, Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, to the Rev. R. G. "What-a-man" Hudson, of New York. The 60-year-old bride and her 50-year-old groom were wed at Lake Sacajawee, Washington. The third member of the family to succumb to the arrow of Cupid was Rolf, Aimee's son by her second marriage. The young scion of the McPhersons married Lorna Dee Smith, a graduate of Angelus Temple Bible School, in July, after several months' engagement. This marriage is Aimee's third venture into matrimony. Her first husband, Robert Semple, died in China, whence he had gone with his young wife to convert the heathen. The second spouse, Harold McPherson, of Providence, R. I., divorced the evangelist after she had refused to give up her preaching and bestow a little of her time on him.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—With the marriage of Aimee Semple McPherson, world-famous evangelist of Angelus Temple, the last of the colorful family of uplifters has succumbed to the machinations of the little god with the bow and arrow, who has hurlt up a record of four in the noted clan within a year.

Aimee's latest matrimonial venture marks the third occasion on which she was led to an altar as a bride, but in this case the altar was an airplane. Always a superb show-woman, Mrs. McPherson staged her latest wedding at sunrise in Yuma, Ariz., and immediately the words that made her a bride were spoken took off into the clear atmosphere of heaven.

The evangelist's new husband is David Hutton, her 250-pound voice instructor, whom she had chosen for the role of Pharaoh in her latest religious opera.

Well known in church musical circles both in California and the East, Hutton became interested in Mrs. McPherson's plans to stage Biblical operas in her famous temple. His engagement for one of the roles followed and Aimee lost her heart to his beautiful baritone voice.

Love, unlike measles or mumps, rarely attains epidemic proportions in a family, in an ordinary family, that is; but the McPherson entourage cannot be called ordinary, so we look for exceptions and get them.

The matrimonial epidemic in the Clan McPherson started last March when Roberta Semple, Aimee's daughter by her first marriage, married William Bradley Smyth, at Singapore. Smyth was the pursuer of the liner President Wilson, on which Mrs. McPherson and Roberta made a world tour. Roberta herself is no mean revivalist, as she proved when she preached a fervent sermon to the backward heathens of Chicago, urging gunmen and bootleggers to forsake their evil ways and listen to the voice of salvation.

The next to succumb to Cupid's well-aimed dart was Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, affectionately called "Ma," mother of Aimee. Ma became a June bride by virtue of her "surprise marriage" to the Rev. R. G. "What-a-Man" Hudson.

Her second voyage on matrimonial seas was with Harold McPherson of Providence, R. I., who divorced her after she had repeatedly turned a deaf ear to his pleading that she spend less time handing out spiritual food to strangers and more time to cooking real grub for him.

DRIVERS OF SCHOOL BUSSES ELECT SAME OFFICERS AT MEET

Present officers of the Greene County School Bus Drivers' Association were re-elected at a reorganization meeting Saturday afternoon at the Court House.

Officers are: Superintendent H. C. Aultman, president; C. C. Graf, Bellbrook, vice-president, and Harley Hollingsworth, Caesar Creek Twp., clerk.

Data was gathered on the length of every school bus route in the county, the number of pupils each bus is hauling and the time consumed in transporting them to schools.

Drivers revealed themselves as interested in a more equitable form of licensing. They feel that since school busses are only on the roads a short space of time each day it is unjust that the operators should be required to pay license fees equal to those of truck drivers who are possibly operating on a twenty-four-hour-a-day schedule. The bus drivers hope to remedy this apparent inequality if possible.

In order to legalize payments to the bus operators for transportation of the children to school this year the county board of education issued driver's certificates to them. Some form of blanket insurance designed to afford greater protection to school children was also advocated at the meeting.

A majority of the seventy school bus drivers in the county attended the meeting, at which J. B. Rife, member of the county school board, presided in the absence of President Aultman, who was indisposed Saturday.

STILL "EXENIAH" TO SOME FOLKS

IT'S probably too late to do anything about it now, but pronouncing that name "Xenia" still seems a difficult assignment in some quarters.

The following is from the Cincinnati Enquirer Monday.

A resident of Xenia made a telephone call from Washington, D. C., recently. He reports the following comment by long-distance operator at the Nation's Capitol:

"I want Xenia, Ohio, 4-1678. That's 'Zeeniah' and its spelled X-E-N-I-A."

"Thank you. Hold the wire please."

Voice in the distance—the operator's: "Hello, Columbus—I want 'Exeniah, 4-1678. It's for a guy that knows how to spell it, but doesn't know how to pronounce it."

The semi-finals matches will be played off this week, Davidson facing Dr. Kester and Stutson meeting Hult.

First round matches in the annual "Vice President's Cup" tournament a consolation event for the sixteen golfers who failed to qualify for the President's Cup play, are also in progress at the club. A smaller trophy will be awarded the winner.

WILL GUARD GRAPES

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—With the approach of the grape season, details of police are now stationed in the New York Central railroad yards in the Bronx to prevent racketeers from imposing a tax on the crates before they are loaded. According to assistant attorney Sylvester Ryan, racketeers in past years have exacted approximately $15,000 a month by levying a tax or two cents on every crate. The police will remain in the yards until the season closes in about six weeks.

MACDONALD THREATENS TO RESIGN

PREMIER WILL QUIT UNLESS COALITION GROUP COOPERATES

Will Announce Date Of
New Elections On
Wednesday

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Date of the dissolution of the British parliament to make way for a general election will be announced on Wednesday, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald stated in the house of commons today.

The statement was the first official intimation from the premier recognizing the inevitability of new elections in view of the uncertain political situation in this country.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—An inspired statement, indicating Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald's intention of resigning from the national coalition government in the event cooperation between all parties is not forthcoming was issued by sources close to the premier today.

At almost the same time, the Liberal party's advisory committee known as the "Shadow Cabinet" burst a bombshell by voting unanimously against the general election at the present time and reiterating its opposition to a protective tariff.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, stood pat on their demand for an election and a tariff. The wide divergence of opinion made Premier MacDonald's position exceedingly difficult, and there was widespread speculation over the course he would be forced to take.

"If all parties do not come in to form part of a national unity," the inspired statement declared, "it is highly probable that Premier MacDonald will find himself in a position in which he would be compelled to tell the country he had found it impossible to obtain national unity a would therefore in those circumstances stand down."

The statement emphasized that Premier MacDonald has "no intention of selling his soul to the conservatives, liberals, or any other party." It pointed out that he might have to appeal for a big united central block which would concentrate upon immediate national needs and ask the nation to give it power to deal with these necessities as they arose.

Premier MacDonald, it was said, is still of the view that the nation requires unity, and that there should be no question of the supremacy of any one party. It is a "doctor's mandate" to deal with the position in which the country now finds itself that the premier is desirous of attaining. It was made clear, however, that MacDonald has no aspirations to a "dictatorship."

The cabinet was scheduled to meet in the premier's private chambers at the house of commons this afternoon to decide upon a general election, which would automatically mean break-up of the coalition government, MacDonald's position, it appeared, depended entirely upon his ability to formulate a "national block" enabling him to remain in office and continue to lead the country through its crisis.

Should this attempt fail, it was understood, the premier would submit his resignation and let the parties fight the election out among themselves.

In conservative quarters, the inspired statement was interpreted as meaning that the premier, knowing that he has the Tory machine behind him on the tariff issue, was attempting to open up an all-party umbrella and gather in as many liberals and laborites as possible. It was admitted, however, that the statement was exceedingly subtle and open to many different interpretations.

PEACE RETURNS TO ATHENS COAL AREA

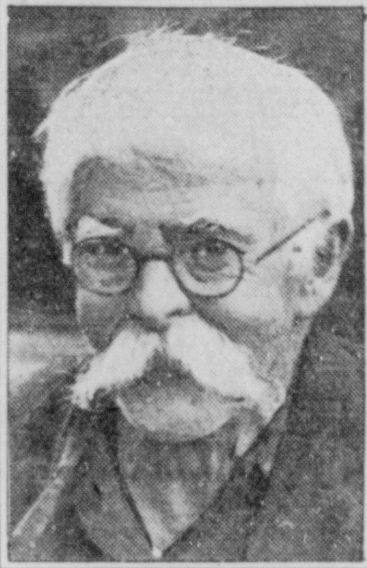

MILLFIELD, O., Sept. 28.—The dove of peace flapped its wings over the Athens County coal region today.

Following a turbulent strike which broke out last week because of disagreement over the employment of checkweighmen, work was resumed at all mines except No. 5 of the Sunday Creek Coal Company and 10-X of the Western Fuel Company where the dispute had its inception.

At the No. 5 and 10-X mines today workers were to conduct elections of new checkweighmen under the supervision of state officials.

Acceptance of a settlement agreement was made at a mass meeting yesterday after miners were warned by officials of the United Mine Workers that they should come to terms in order to avoid hardship through unemployment this winter. Union officials asserted, however, that the settlement arrangement, which was proposed by Governor George White following conferences in Columbus last week, was not wholly satisfactory.

DRY ASSOCIATIONS PLAN RETALIATORY MOVE AGAINST WETS

Propose To Influence Organizations To Repudiate Wet Stand

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Genuinely alarmed over the powerful national influences that have been thrown against prohibition in recent weeks, the federation of allied dry organizations announced today a program of retaliatory tactics against those organizations that have "gone wet."

Singled out for special attention by the drys are the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, the American Bar Association and the American Medical Association, all of which in convention this year have denounced the Eighteenth Amendment and demanded, at least, modification of the Volstead act.

The dry strategy is to "bore from within" in each of these numerically and politically powerful national associations, with the ultimate object of so mobilizing the dry members that the declarations of opposition to existing dry laws may be repudiated at some future date.

Special drives to fortify and increase the dry elements in each of these great organizations are planned. It was announced by Dr. Ernest C. Cherrington, chairman of the dry group. He contended that the anti-prohibition resolutions in each case had been "put over" by a small but militant minority, who caught the drys unawares and unorganized for resistance.

The majority of the membership of all four organizations, Cherrington said.

THREE MORE BANKS FORCED TO CLOSE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—The Northern Central Trust Co. Bank here failed to open its doors today. The institution was closed upon order of the state banking department.

The closed bank is one of the largest in Philadelphia. It has five branch offices.

Announcement on the doors was confined to a statement that the bank was in the hands of the state.

NILES, O., Sept. 28.—Continued withdrawal of deposits today forced directors of the Niles Trust Co. to close the institution, and place it in the hands of State Banking Superintendent Ira Fulton.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 28.—The Commercial Bank of Frederick, which has three branches, closed today. A notice on the door said the directors had asked the state banking examiners to take over the bank's affairs.

OHIO PAROLE BOARD BEGINS LONG TASK

MANSFIELD, O., Sept. 28.—Holding the fate of more than 2,000 prisoners, the new state board of paroles today started its long deliberation of the cases of inmates who have become eligible for release.

Headed by Judge William A. Cuff, who is chairman, members of the board visited the Mansfield reformatory today to begin consideration of cases awaiting it here.

After a short session, board members will go to the London prison farm and the Marysville reformatory for women tomorrow, returning to the Ohio Penitentiary at Columbus Wednesday.

Man Ford Lifted From Obscurity, Was Rhythm Master

L EWISTON, Me., Sept. 28.—Alanson Mellen Dunham, who captured a nation's heart by the simple old-fashioned melodies he played on his violin, and whom Henry Ford's appreciation first helped to fame, was dead here today at the age of 78. He had been ill for two weeks.

The acclaim of the public and men in high positions came to "Mellie," as he was known, late in life. He had been a shoemaker maker of rare ability in Norway—so skilled, indeed, that Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary took a pair of his shoes with him on the voyage during which he discovered the North Pole. Coming to America, Dunham won an old-time fiddler's contest here, as a result of which Ford invited him to play for him.

Dunham claimed he never took a violin lesson in his life. But he was a master of rhythm.

To the end, when fame shone upon him, he remained simple and unaffected.

THREE FLYERS DEAD AS PLANE CRASHES DOWN

Socially Prominent Physician Victim; Two Others Dead

FONDA, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Dr. R. Bartow Read, 33, of New York, divorced husband of Hope Williams, actress, and two companions were killed when the airplane Dr. Read was piloting crashed into a field six miles from here. Officials investigating the accident today were told the plane had been seen zig-zagging before it fell.

Dr. Samuel S. Ellis, 29, of Buffalo, and his brother Joseph William Ellis, Jr., 24, were the other victims. Dr. Read, who was socially prominent, was a Yale graduate and a member of the Racquet and Tennis Club of New York.

Joseph W. Ellis graduated last June from Antioch College, Yellow Springs, where he was considered an efficient and popular student. He left immediately to take a position in the bureau of employment of New York state. He spent five years at Antioch majoring in economics under Prof. Leiserson and worked during his cooperative periods in Dayton, where he lived at the Antioch Club.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Stanley Bateman, youthful flyer was in a hospital today suffering from critical injuries received when an airplane he was piloting crashed to the ground in sight of hundreds near Mitchell Field. Two passengers who accompanied Bateman were killed instantly in the wreck. The plane went into a spin at an altitude of 200 feet shortly after the take-off. The nose suddenly sank, and Bateman was unable to regain control of the craft. The victims were Edward Dietl and Charles Lindstrom.

ANOTHER WORLD SERIES PARTY

THE GAZETTE'S World Series Radio Party, annual popular service of this newspaper, will be revived Thursday as the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Athletics begin their 1931 campaign for the title of world champions.

The big public address system operated by this paper will be hooked to four powerful loud speakers placed in second story windows of the Gazette Bldg., S. Detroit St. The play-by-play broadcast of the games from Sportsman's Park, St. Louis and the home field of the Athletics, will be received here by radio reception and amplified to carry clearly to listeners in front of the Gazette Bldg., so that fans will hear the game in the words of the press box observer.

Through the same medium a play-by-play story of the game will be transcribed in the editorial rooms of the Gazette by Phil Frame, sports editor and the full account will be carried in evening editions insofar as possible before press time.

Every baseball fan is invited to listen to the broadcast in front of the Gazette Bldg. The first game starts Thursday in St. Louis. Two games will be played there and then the scene of the games shifts to Philadelphia for three games, if that many are necessary.

MOTHER GIVES SON TO LAW

Would Permit Sentence For Life To End Criminal Career Of Youth

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A strange human drama in which a mother, with breaking heart, consented to permit her beloved "black sheep" son to be placed in danger of sentence to prison for life as a fourth offender, was being enacted here today.

Mrs. Margaret Everitt agreed to have her husband, Frank Everitt, sign the complaint charging their 23-year-old son Emmett with stealing the family automobile. Upset by criminal tendencies the boy has shown since he was 15—he has served prison sentences following conviction of grand larceny charges—the parents determined to reform their son even if, under the Baumes law of New York state conviction of the fourth felony charge makes a life-imprisonment sentence mandatory.

The automobile was stolen about two weeks ago. Saturday Emmett, unkempt and rain-drenched, hungry, scared, visited his aunt, Miss Annie Everitt. She put him up in her house. A young nephew of Emmett's notified his father, however.

After a heart-rending discussion with his wife, Everitt asked the police to arrest his son.

Emmett should go some place where he can not hurt himself or others," his aunt said. "He's always been a sweet boy, the kind that helped with the dishes and was helpful around the house. "Then these strange spells would come over him. He went car-crazy."

LEADING FRENCH STATESMEN RECEIVED BY VON HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—In an atmosphere of friendliness promising greater Franco-German amity than at any time in centuries, the two leading statesmen of France were received by President Paul von Hindenburg today.

M. Pierre Laval, premier of France, and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, apostle of peace and unceasing champion of Franco-German cooperation, spent fifteen minutes with the octogenarian president of the German republic, and came away with what they described as "one of the most pleasant memories of their lives."

The first French statesmen to pay an official visit to Berlin in more than fifty years, Laval and Briand went directly to the presidential palace from their hotel at short while before noon. They were accompanied by Chancellor Heinrich Brüning and Foreign Minister Dr. Julius Curtius of Germany.

The meeting was as friendly and devoid of official stiffness as it was brief.

"It was a most happy opportunity for us to meet Germany's president," M. Laval told International News Service as he left the palace. "He was extremely cordial. I shall always remember this meeting as one of the most pleasant moments of my life."

By a strange quirk of fate or the vagaries of French politics, the man who visited Berlin as the figurehead of France to shake the hand of Germany's "staunch oak" in the presidential palace was a man steeped in Gallic philosophy, a man who a few months ago would have no more thought of leaving his native shores than he would of failing to stand when the Marseillaise was sung.

Archbishop Warns Nation Must Apply Godly Principles

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28.—Business and political leaders today faced a warning from Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O. P., that the country can survive its economic crisis "only by application of the principles of Christian justice."

His message contained the caution that "we shall come out of the present crisis triumphantly if we all unite in God, if every class and every group in the country can be made to appreciate the claims the common welfare of the nation has on us."

Executives, judges and all public officials of whatever political faith "must rise above party considerations to serve the common good," the archbishop said.

The same solution was suggested for employment troubles. "In the language of Pope Pius XI, it is as flagrantly unjust for capital to seize all the profits as it would be for labor to seize all the profits—assuming that labor were in a position to do so."

"The capitalism of tomorrow and there will be no tomorrow unless it is reformed according to moral principles—must be satisfied with a fair return on its investment."

"It should form a corporation and share its surplus with the laborers who produce it and pay tribute, in the form of taxes, to the state that protects it," the archbishop added.

STUDENT RIOT MOBS FOREIGN MINISTER; DENOUNCE POLICIES

Dr. Wang Injured; Anti-Jap Rioting Occurs In Cities

NANKING, Sept. 28.—A riotous mob of 5,000 students, protesting China's policy of non-resistance in Manchuria, today attacked and seriously injured Dr. C. T. Wang, foreign minister of the Chinese Nationalist government.

Wang was mobbed at his office after the students had paraded the streets, demanding war against Japan, and denouncing the foreign minister because of his failure to secure intervention by the League of Nations in Manchuria.

Wang, who is 59 years old, tried to placate the leaders of the mob, but they rushed upon him, striking him with their fists, clubs and stones, smashing his spectacles and inflicting injuries upon his head and body.

Three of Wang's personal servants and half a dozen foreign office guards finally rushed into the fray and saved Wang's life by carrying him from his office to the residence of President Chiang Kai-Shek.

The students continued to wreck furniture and break windows at the foreign office, and shouted demands that Wang should be removed from office.

PEIPING, Sept. 28.—Shouting "down with Japan," hundreds of Chinese students paraded through the legation quarter today, but adequate police protection prevented any violent outbreaks.

Similar anti-Japanese demonstrations were reported at Canton, where the population observed a three-minute period of silence as a protest against alleged Japanese atrocities in Manchuria.

In Hong Kong, Chinese mobs continued attacks against Japanese shopkeepers, according to advices received here, with British troops aiding the police in efforts to restore order.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Dispatches from Hong Kong today said that a "state of emergency" had been declared there following several days of anti-Japanese rioting in which at least six Japanese were killed.

Two British destroyers have moved up to a position near the wharves to protect the Japanese steamship Asama Maru, on which a number of Japanese residents of Hong Kong have taken refuge.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Dispatches from Hong Kong today said that a "state of emergency" had been declared there following several days of anti-Japanese rioting in which at least six Japanese were killed.

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—Early solution of the Sino-Japanese crisis in Manchuria was predicted here today following reports M. Yoshizawa, Japanese delegate, had been instructed by his government to inform the League of Nations council that Japan would comply with Geneva's request for immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops.

It was understood Japanese forces would be withdrawn from the entire Manchurian railway zone, including the points which Japan still considers as "incensed" by the Chinese. Japanese nationalists in the district are expected to be evacuated by the troops.

Tokyo's decision was expected to facilitate the league's handling of the affair.

START DISBARMENT AGAINST ATTORNEY

URBANA, O., Sept. 28.—Hearing of disbarment proceedings against Prosecuting Attorney William Marvin Vance of Champaign County were to be held here today before Common Pleas Judge Frank Clevenger of Wilmington, appointed to the case by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall.

The disbarment proceedings were brought against Vance by the Champaign County Bar Association which charged the prosecuting attorney with misconduct in office and unprofessional conduct as a lawyer.

Among the specifications listed against Vance was one that while representing Grayce Andrews in an attempt to get a settlement from Earl M. Andrews of Tiffin, her former husband, he threatened Andrews with prosecution for perjury and was instrumental in procuring an unlawful indictment against Andrews.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 28.—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Richard Lynch, 60, former Belmont County treasurer and sheriff, who was found dead in bed at his home yesterday. It was announced today. Lynch was in charge of law enforcement in this region during the 1922 coal strike when the militia had to be utilized following a fatal riot.

LEARN MAGAZINE TO POLL CANDIDATES; TO DRAW INTEREST

Smith And Coolidge To Be On Ballot Report Says

(Copyright 1931, by International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Authoritative information that the Literary Digest is planning a national poll of presidential candidates aroused wide interest among political leaders here today.

Such a test of public sentiment on party selections was viewed by party managers here as likely to shed a very penetrating light upon the selections of the nominating conventions next June.

Because of the high repute of the Digest polls in the past, political leaders declared, an overwhelming endorsement of any candidate in the forthcoming poll would unquestionably powerfully strengthen his position in the nominating race.

The only information regarding the poll that has been made public is that the editors contemplate the inclusion in the list of candidates the names of both former President Calvin Coolidge and former governor Alfred E. Smith.

Their names would add enormously to the value and interest of the poll both for the public at large and party leaders. Their inclusion, however, is dependent upon their willingness to be listed.

It has been rumored in administrative quarters in the past few days that Mr. Coolidge will shortly definitely take himself out of the 1932 race. One of Mr. Hoover's friends recently asserted that in the near future Mr. Coolidge will make public a communication saying he is not a candidate and declaring himself for President Hoover.

Mr. Coolidge himself has maintained his unbroken silence concerning his position in the matter. The only information regarding his attitude is in the form of an anecdote, lately quoted in political quarters, in which the former president is reported to have observed in response to an inquiry from a friend about his possible candidacy, "If the Republican nomination is worth anything, Mr. Hoover will get it. It is not worth having, I don't want it."

Mr. Smith has likewise maintained a tightlipped silence on his plans. A poll contest between him and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, the leading Democratic contender for the 1932 nomination, would rival in interest a test between Mr. Coolidge and President Hoover.

Friends of Governor Roosevelt here say that they would gladly welcome such a informal ballot. They profess supreme confidence in any such test, reckoning heavily on Governor Roosevelt's admitted popularity in the South.

A close personal friend and supporter of Governor Roosevelt visiting the capital today declared that an informal survey of southern sentiment on the party nomination disclosed that the New York governor was far in the lead. He asserted that no campaign organization has as yet been established for Governor Roosevelt, but admitted that much "foundation" work is being done.

NORWAY, EGYPT AND SWEDEN FOLLOWING ACTION OF BRITAIN

United States And France
Face Money
Isolation

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Following the lead of Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Egypt were off the gold standard today as new problems arising from changing monetary values caused serious concern to the governments of Denmark, Finland, Greece and the Irish Free State.

Unless something is done quickly, America and France run the risk of finding themselves sitting high and dry on bags of cornered gold amounting to nearly three-fourths of the world's total supply, sitting in splendid financial isolation.

The belief exists here that within a short time only the United States, France, Holland and Czechoslovakia and Poland, whose currencies are linked with the French, will be operating on a gold basis.

Irish currency being linked with the British pound, when Great Britain went off the gold standard Ireland also suspended gold payments. Irish currency in fact was never based on gold but was backed only by Irish treasury notes based on British government securities.

The 1929 currency act was amended to permit the use of American securities, also, as backing but few were acquired. Inasmuch as ninety-three percent of Irish exports go to Great Britain it is argued that Irish trade would suffer disastrous losses if the Free State went on the dollar standard.

The collapse of the gold standard in the Scandinavian countries was partially attributed to the depreciation of the British pound, due to the close trade and financial relations between Norway, Sweden, and England, and also to the recent failure of Sweden to obtain new loaning credits in the United States and France.

The government of both Norway and Sweden prohibited the exporting of gold, and in Sweden the national bank raised its discount rate from 6 to 8 per cent.

The action of Norway and Sweden in suspending the gold standard had immediate repercussions in Danish and Finnish financial circles, with both the governments of Denmark and Finland taking steps today to deal with anticipated depreciation in their national currencies.

While these events were taking place in northern Europe, dispatches from Cairo announced that the Egyptian government had decided to prohibit the exportation of gold, thus dropping the gold stand in Egypt. Increases in a number of import duties were also proposed because of the decline in the value of the English pound compared with gold-supported currencies.

Greece was also having acute money troubles, the government is suing a decree drastically regulating the purchase and sale of gold, and placing all foreign currency operations exclusively in the hands of the Banque De Greece.

The bank raised its discount rate to 12 per cent as a further protection, and Greek cabinet officials declared that all possible measures would be taken to maintain the integrity of the national currency.

Meanwhile in Ireland, officials of the Irish Free State were confronted with a movement for a break in the fiscal relations between the Free State and England, and for the conversion of a 6,000,000-pound Free State credit in London into American dollars.

Such a plan would give the Free State a gold standard independent of England, but strong opposition was voiced by President Cosgrave, who urged suspension of the gold standard so long as a similar policy is maintained by the British government.

DEATH-BED STORY LINKS GUN USER

OTTAWA, O., Sept. 28.—A death-bed statement made by Frank Conway, Sugar Creek Twp. constable, may be introduced today as evidence in the case of Daniel Hunt, charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Leon Moebuck, farmer.

Moebuck was slain and Conway was fatally wounded on the Moebuck farm as they attempted to route hog thieves from the fields.

Shortly before his death and in the presence of ambulance drivers who were rushing him to a hospital for an operation, Conway identified Hunt, according to officials, as the man with whom he and Moebuck had engaged in the fatal gun battle.

Hunt pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned Friday. The arraignment was continued until today so that evidence might be introduced.

DO-X All Dry and Snooty

This unusual view of the giant DO-X, largest heavier-than-air craft in the world, makes the German flying boat appear to be sticking its nose up in the air with all the snootiness which its class permits. High and very dry, the DO-X is undergoing repairs at North Beach Airport, New York, before its return flight to Germany. The DO-X is drier than many craft out of water, since the bar of the Dornier plane has been closed during its stay within the American 12-mile limit.

Where Japs Are in Control

This map clearly indicates the strategic points held by Japanese troops in the warfare waged against Chinese soldiers in Manchuria. The city of Mukden, ancient capital of Manchuria, was taken in the first Japanese offensive. Tsingtao, on the Yellow Sea, was the scene of a landing party of Japanese soldiers, who extended their control along the railroad as the lines show.

Thrilling Rescue of Flyers at Sea

It is getting to be a frequent occurrence for the tortoise to lend a helping hand to the hare, these days. Rescues of flyers at sea by the slower and safer water craft have become so common that they are no longer regarded as a novelty. The picture above shows one such rescue when the survivors of the Spanish Dornier-Wal military plane were hoisted aboard the liner Saturnia after they had crashed in the Mediterranean Sea. The photo was made from the rescuing craft and shows the men on the wing of their wrecked plane. The flyers were all high officials in the Spanish Army.

HAS UNIQUE RECORD FOR MANAGEMENT OF WEDDINGS FOR 4,000

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Outstripping even the record of DeWolf Hopper who has managed many weddings during his career, Miss Jessy Rhoades, the world's premier wedding manager, with a record of nearly 4,000 marriage parties behind her, stopped in San Francisco the other day.

To be exact, Miss Rhoades has managed 3959 ceremonies for the Little Church of the Flowers in Glendale and its sister chapel, the Wee Kirk Amapang the Heather.

Unique in a profession that is in itself unique, Miss Rhoades has directed 7918 persons down the aisle to the altar, until now the Church of the Flowers is perhaps even better known for weddings than New York's celebrated Little Church Around the Corner.

From her vast experience Miss Rhoades formed the conviction that most of the established wedding traditions are "all wrong."

"The bridegroom is no always nervous," she said. "In fact, the nervous bridegroom is rather the exception."

"Nor are brides superstitious about Friday. Parents of the bride pair do not always weep and brides, scorning the admonition of the old rhyme about 'something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue', seldom wear anything old."

These are just a few of her deductions, made from the seventeen weddings a week she has managed since taking up her work in 1925.

Although most weddings move smoothly and on time, those which are delayed, most frequently are held up through the forgetting of the marriage license or the loss of the bride's bouquet, she disclosed.

Changing etiquette through the years is most noticed in the marriage of those who have been married before Miss Rhoades said.

Formerly the second or succeeding marriage must be absolutely informal. But nowadays, while the bride who has been married before will have a simple wedding, she may have attendants.

In speaking of her many interesting experiences Miss Rhoades told of the nervous bridegroom who announced in a clear voice, "With this wing I thee red."

She also told of the shortest wedding ceremony on record, related to her by a clergyman officiating at one of them.

"The ceremony, said to have been in vogue in Montana in pioneer days was simply the command, 'Arise, Grab hands. You're hitched.' 'Those who ask for a short service would like that,' Miss Rhoades remarked.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

A plan for solving the troubles of cotton and wheat comes nearly at the same moment from points as far separated as South Carolina and Washington of state.

The theory of it is that you can induce the farmer to plant no cotton or no wheat for 1932, only by guaranteeing him a profit for that year equal to what he ordinarily expects to make.

That sounds too good to be true, and probably is. But let us see how it is figured.

Suppose Bill Jones of Texas and Sam Smith of Kansas come to the Farm Board and say: "Cotton prices will advance if it is known that a very small acreage will be grown next year, and so will wheat prices under the same condition. Your stabilization corporations hold great stocks of cotton and wheat."

"Very well, we will agree that we will grow no cotton and no wheat in 1932, and will not allow any to be grown on the land we operated this year."

"In return, you will agree to sell us next year, out of your stocks, as much cotton and wheat as we grew this year, at a price two cents a pound for cotton, and twenty cents a bushel for wheat, under the market price on the day we buy it. Maybe that is not the correct profit margin, but we can settle that in a friendly manner."

"The point is, we will grow none of the stuff at all, if you will guarantee us a small living profit next year, and in that way we think we can make prices advance."

Whether the Farm Board would listen to such a proposal or not, several objections pop up at once. The question of policing or enforcement is one. The question whether or not producers, now in the conundrum, would wreck it by greatly increasing their operations, is another. The fact that the Farm Board holdings of wheat and cotton are limited, is a third. Of course the board could agree to sell only as much as they had on hand, and there might be such a rush for contracts that the late comers would be left out and be sore.

The greatest difficulty of all is that under such a plan the Farm Board would sell its stabilization stocks for much less than the market. Yet it is conceivable that market prices would be much higher, because of the reduced 1932 plantings, that the board would lose less in this way than by working off its stuff as it is now doing.

Anyway, it is an interesting scheme, and something useful may yet come of it.

CHURCH VESTRY TO HONOR MEMBER

MORE than fifty years of active church work will be fittingly recognized when Joseph A. Piper, 835 N. King St., who has been a member of the vestry of Christ Episcopal Church for half a century or more, is tendered a farewell dinner at 6:30 o'clock Monday night at the Coll-Inn, N. Detroit St.

Members of the vestry are sponsoring the informal affair as a parting expression of their appreciation for Mr. Piper's length of service on behalf of the church. Mr. Piper is moving with his family soon to Washington, D. C.

Oldest member of the congregation and vestry in point of years he has devoted to the church, Mr. Piper has held the office of senior warden for many years. He also sang in the choir for a number of years.

Tribute to Mr. Piper's service was paid by the pastor, the Rev. Carl O. Nybladh, in his sermon at church services Sunday morning.

Fashion In Millinery Revives Name Of Empress Eugenie

THE Empress Eugenie died in June, 1920, a saddened and frustrated old woman, but her name lives again now through a coquettish fashion in the millinery world.

Once again the name of the queen of the second empire is on everybody's lips—not because of a niche she hoped to carve in history, but because of a coquettish fashion in hat styles.

And to many of the young things from Maine to California who are perching this sartorial creation over their right eye brows, Empress Eugenie, is only a name for a derby-like bonnet with a bit of a plume, whether the return of this hat style is significant of a revival of the fashions of the Second Empire with a consequent return to Victorian modesty in feminine attire, remains to be seen.

At least the style recalls the legend of the lovely young empress who, in her youth, never wore the same gown twice and in her disappointed old age haunted the Louvre, the site of the Tuilleries, a feeble, black-skawed wraith of former glory.

Whose heart, history says, first was broken because her husband, Napoleon III, did not die a hero and then broken anew because her son, Louis Bonaparte, did. She was born of humble parents in Granada, Spain, in 1826 and at the age of 26 had achieved the height of her ambition—marriage to the then French Emperor, Louis Napoleon.

Eugenie was never content. She quarrelled frequently with her husband and once because he refused to increase her allowance, she sold part of the crown jewels. Many historians agree that it was largely the intrigues of his empress that drove Napoleon III into the disastrous Franco-Prussian war. Then when word came that Napoleon was captured, she flared back at the messenger:

"You lie. He was never captured. He died."

But he was captured and later died of effects of a surgical operation which followed temporary imprisonment. France overthrew the empire and re-established the republic.

The still handsome empress, whose most famous portrait shows her in a costume of white satin, light at the waist, with flowing skirt and sheathlike bodice, was forced to flee from France. Queen Victoria gave her sanctuary in England where she occupied Farnborough Hall.

It was here that news came to her of the death of her son, Louis Napoleon, sometimes called Napoleon IV, in Zululand, June 1, 1879, six years after the death of his father.

Eugenie then lost heart altogether—she had nothing more to live for. She lamented that she could not die. She was 88 in 1914 when the World War broke out and for a time the spirit of revenge flared anew in her tired heart. But no one took her seriously. She had been permitted for some time to revisit France but she was ignored. Eugenie never was loved greatly. She was cold, egotistical, narrow-minded, self-seeking, vain of her great beauty. Some of her gowns utilized 1,000 yards of material, it is said, and she wore always the small derby plumed hat that has given a fashion to 1931. It is this fashion, set by the Empress Eugenie, that is said to have given rise to the expression "setting your cap for a man." The hat is worn over the right eye.

There were many men in Eugenie's life, but though she loved admiration, she never gave her heart. In June, 1920, old, bent, black-robed, leaning on a cane, she went to her native Spain for a visit and died there shortly afterward.

For a day or so her name lived again on the front pages. Then it sank into oblivion. A coquettish fashion revives it in an era when the person who bore that name is forgotten.

Danville, Conn., which produces most of the hats worn in America, is glad for the new style. Its idle mills are humming turning out the new fashions.

Old Mr. Depression has to take his hat off to the late Empress Eugenie. If it hadn't been for her hair for hats the chapeau factories of Danbury, Conn., hat-making center of America, undoubtedly wouldn't be running full blast now. The present fad for the diminutive headpieces is believed to have originated in Paris, during the revival of an old opera, in which the singers wore Eugenie hats. The fad quickly spread to America and in less time than it takes to tell 13 Danbury factories began working day and night shifts. Some of the workers are said to average 17 hours daily and are making a weekly wage of $140. Above is an inset of the hat which is causing all the excitement.

THROATS COVERED BY NEXT WINTER GOWNS SAYS PARIS SCRIBE

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Nearly normal necklines are novel features of both day and evening gowns for the coming winter wear. Throats ought not to be so bare this season for the smartest women are covering 'em up, at least in the front.

Sports and daytime dresses have little turnover collars or button up very close. Cowl drapes are to be seen on a great many and have a tendency to hide the throat.

V-necked afternoon dresses have scarves that are folded or draped close to the collar-bone.

Evening gowns are definitely higher in front and very often in the back as well. Madeleine Vionnet is covering up the back, even though the wearer might have passed her entire summer acquiring a beautiful tan. She puts the low cut on the sides instead.

Tollmann puts a new type of decollete on a cerise satin gown. The square neckline in front has shouldered straps which broaden and continue across the shoulders in a wide loose fold.

Patou and Lucien Lelong are stressing the long evening back with crossed or strapped ribbons. Another designer makes draped scarf treatments, sometimes one-sided, forming a berth over one shoulder and a scarf over the other. The old-fashioned off-the-shoulder decollete is also to be seen, especially on the new wool evening gown. Dinner gowns with sleeves have simple or square cuts and going very modest.

Garnet Johns had the sweetest man in town when he went to the Food and Household Show, held in Los Angeles. Made entirely from cookie dough, this eccentric effigy was exhibited as an example of what can be done in the way of shaping and trimming a cookie. Some sugar daddy, eh, and with dough.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldest thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?—Ezra, ix, 14.

THRILL OF FOOTBALL

Baseball may be considered the national game of the United States, but nothing seems to thrill a crowd quite so much to its depths, as a game between champion football teams. Of course the short season and the relatively small number of football games has something to do with that high pitch of excitement.

It is complained that football is not so easy to watch as baseball, that the ball disappears in a wriggling knot of players, and you can't tell where it is until the knot unties. Perhaps this mystery of the game only makes the spectators more intent and excited, as they peer into the squirming mass of players.

Parents worry more or less about the sprained joints and strained muscles that result from this hard physical clash. While a good many boys are hurt, the number of serious injuries is not so large. The chances of such injury to the boy on the football field may be less than the chances which he runs when he operates the family automobile day after day.

Educators often complain that their students throw themselves into the football maelstrom so thoroughly that real study becomes a secondary matter. Any school or college which permits any of its athletes to slip through on inferior standing simply encourages such neglect. If participation in football is made absolutely dependent on excellence of scholarship, the permanent interests of the athlete should not suffer.

Football may take too much of a boy's interest, but what would he be doing without it? Boys of the type that make good athletes can get into a peck of trouble if they have no outlet for their energy. They are better off putting the ball than they are roaming the roads of Ohio in search of adventure.

THE STAFF OF LIFE

How far is the surplus of wheat that can't be sold at a fair price, due to food fads? The wheat growers who are worrying about low prices should look into this question. It may take a lot of advertising to bring back their staple to full popularity. Certain it is that many young women and girls, and some older ones too, have conceived the idea that they are more beautiful if they can reduce their weight.

Many of them limit themselves on wheat bread, which they seem to think is a fattening food. Many of these youngsters, who to a sensible eye seem to have a perfectly wholesome and healthy figure, are worrying about their weight. They have resolved to knock off another five or ten pounds by a starvation diet. Perhaps they have conceived the notion that the boys like light weight dancing partners better, and they would sacrifice a good deal of physical well being if they could be sure of partners at the dances.

In many families the amount of bread eaten has been reduced. Many sit down to dinners consisting mostly of meats, salads, vegetables, and delects, with bread omitted. Yet bread has always been called the staff of life. One can't help thinking that many of these people will suffer.

Bread has been a leading reliance of the human race for food from the earliest times. There is practically no waste in it, it is completely digested, and it gives a large amount of nutrition for the money.

The girls who go slow on this food should consider that an appearance of health is the finest kind of beauty. While they may reduce their weight by cutting out substantial foods like bread, they are also likely to make themselves pale and colorless.

THE CONVENTION

The Big Parade has passed. The pavements that resounded with the music of marching feet from noon until after dark at Detroit, Michigan, recently are silent again, but in the ears of a million spectators still rings the rattle of drums and blare of trumpets that enlivened the spectacle staged by the American Legion.

Whether there were 100,000 or only 85,000 men and women in line does not greatly matter. A long time is likely to elapse before anyone again sees so many representatives of so many parts of the Union passing in review. Six thousand came from Massachusetts alone. The mills and mines of the industrial East, the cotton fields and peach and citrus orchards of the South, the "Skookum" country, the wheat and corn fields of the Great American Plain poured into the parade their various samples of Americanhood. The eye grew tired attempting to keep pace with the diversity of the panorama unrolled before it; but the heart beat faster when an Illinois band struck up "Old Kentucky," or an Ohio unit swung by to the air of "Michigan, My Michigan." There was the unity of sentiment that backgrounds the Nation's racial heterogeneity.

The Big Parade gave those who watched it a lesson in ethnology, as well as one in geography. The banners bearing the names of cities and towns that rarely make the front page were not more different than the "types" that marched behind them. A notable contrast was provided by the Arkansas delegation and the delegations from industrial centers. All the men from Arkansas, and all the girls in its stunning "Smile Band," could easily have been mistaken for members of a single family. They looked alike. The men and women from sections of the country that have experienced a larger infiltration of recent immigrants did not look alike. They were as diverse in stature and face as the countries from which they have so recently been translated. Yet all were Americans, all marching behind the same flag in what might be called a parade of the nations, a personification of "e pluribus unum."

The Big Parade has passed but it will linger long in the minds of those who were privileged to see it, a spectacle and an inspiration. As darkness fell upon the marchers, thousands turned back to their vocations with a quickened feeling that America is safe.

HAS WHIP HAND

An examination of the present financial condition of Great Britain and Japan leads the Brookings Institution to the conclusion that the United States will hold the whip hand at the Geneva disarmament conference next winter, as far as the limitation of naval armament is concerned.

The idea that the financial ability of the United States to outbuild Great Britain and Japan will enable it to force them to meet its views on naval reduction is not convincing. Ability to build, without the inclination to do so, will never get this country anywhere. The United States has the money to give it the place on the seas to which it is entitled, which would make its shores immune to attack from abroad; but it also has a rich harvest of pacifists, who howl down any suggestion that it ought to build up at least to the strength permitted it by the London agreement.

Great Britain and Japan cannot be whipped into line by the display of bulging pockets, whose contents they know very well, the pacifists will do their best to prevent the United States from devoting to adequate naval defense. Ships talk. Talk about ships there is so little likelihood we shall ever build doesn't.

Whatever else you think about the way things are going in Great Britain, you must admit that the islanders are keeping stiff upper lips.

NEW YORK—A columnist's raw material:

What explains the fall of Chinatown as an eating place? Twenty years ago there were 40 world-famous restaurants in the vicinity of Pell and Mott Sts.; now the class trade is pretty well restricted to four.....

The largest non-essential item on the budget of a middle-class New Yorker is taxi-fare.....Probably true also in Paris, where low rates encourage cabbing on the slightest pretext.....But Washington, D. Cagney is very gentlemanly and mild in real life. Robinson is inclined to be hard boiled.....

ORGANIZED MODESTY
A handbill in yesterday's mail is completely baffling: is it a serious piece of propaganda or is it a gentle piece of kidding? Quotes: "Membership more than 4,322,000—NATIONAL ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN HOUSEWIVES—Headquarters: By the Cookstove and the Cradle with the Washbub Nearby. It is now 'chic' for women to be modest....."

THE VACANT CHAIRS
Two hundred odd Gold Star Mothers and war widows give a solemn note to the crossing. Whenever the sea kicks up a bit vacancied begin to appear in the starboard deck chairs; some of them have had an unpleasant time of it. But on the other hand, some of the whitest-haired ladies have sung "There's a place for me" from Armentiers' lullaby while frail youngsters were beating hasty retreat from shuffleboard games.....

Every berth aboard is taken. In our cabin are two Mormon missionaries in their twenties. One of them has been conducting, through the past summer, a hygiene exhibit in Dresden—which undertook to show how, by proper diet and exercise, it is possible to avoid most of the maladies which plague us. Seaside, evidently, is in a class by itself, for he has only been able to leave his bunk twice during the voyage and appear on deck.....

LAGGING ODDS—THE OCEAN TIDES
Owing to the rapid rotation of the earth, and the irregular contour of the shore lines and ocean floors, the tides do not manifest themselves immediately under the disturbing influence of the moon, but follow along after they have had time to get under way. The mean time intervening between the meridian over a given shore line, and the flood tide at that point is known as the "establishment of the port." The time between the passage of the moon and the arrival of flood tide varies, but the mean time is found. At New York City the mean interval is 8 hours 13 minutes.....

Night dispatching of planes at United Airport, Los Angeles, is done with an ingenious device consisting of two lamps attached to cords long enough to reach the end of any of the five runways. I don't know why, but they are. Men aren't like that. A man thinks it all over, or, at least, he thinks he thinks. He decides that all is lost for him, that he is defeated, that his high hopes are blocked, and that the black clouds are gathering around his head, and the poison of despair seeps into the hinders of his heart..... MANCHURIA REGARDED LOST TO CHINA NOW AS JAPAN MOVES IN

NEW YORK—Whatever American diplomacy may think of Japan's latest policy in Manchuria, American financiers with interests in the Orient are uneasy.....

The Japanese appear to financial interests as showing convincing signs of a too long pre-arranged plan to be lightly turned aside by a League of Nations' warning. The disturbance which must ensue if the Japanese proceed with what seems to be their present program has possibilities it is difficult to estimate. Congressman Ernest Gibson of Vermont, who recently returned from a tour of the Far East, brought with him accounts of very ominous internal conditions in Japan—of a thoroughly discontented people and many evidences of threatened revolutionary developments.....

If so serious a situation exists, the suggestion is made here that a governmental move to consolidate national sentiment by the stirring up of enthusiasm in some foreign enterprise would not be surprising, especially considering that Tokio has coveted Manchuria for years and getting it while allaying domestic dissatisfaction simultaneously would be killing two birds with the same stone.....

Whether or not there is truth in Japanese complaints of Chinese acts of aggression against the Japanese-controlled South Manchurian railroad is deemed unimportant. Such acts, it is believed here, could have been stopped and even punished without proceeding with so extensive a military occupation of the country had it not been deliberately intended to grab and hold it permanently at the first good excuse, which perhaps was furnished by irresponsible Chinese elements.....

The theory that Japanese military influence has predominated in disregard of the civil administration's intentions is considered no improbability. That it will continue to do so is thought equally likely. The method is mentioned as typically Japanese.....

Japan, it is recalled, opened the Russo-Japanese war without a formal declaration of hostilities. The declaration did not follow until after the czar's naval force at Port Arthur had been surprised and destroyed, causing much international criticism—which, however, did not alter the fact that the Mikado had gained an advantage he held to while the struggle lasted.....

Nobody familiar with the Orient doubts that the Japanese once dug in, in Manchuria, can hold it against everything China can do to dislodge them.....

To diplomatic representatives from League of Nations and other sources, it is foreseen that Tokio will make conciliatory replies, but ultimately the prediction is general that she will continue to occupy Manchuria unless Russia offers forcible objection. This is exactly what is expected to occur as soon as Moscow becomes convinced of its unavailability.....

Of Russia's strength under communism there is great uncertainty, but anyway, it is agreed that a Russo-Japanese clash would be far more serious than one between the Japanese and Chinese—so serious, in fact, that the failure of such means as League of Nations' representations and protest under the Kellogg treaty to prevent it would be convincing proof of their worthlessness.....

From China much effervescence, but not much action, is anticipated. Manchuria is believed here to be lost to her unless foreign interposition results effectively.....

Tokio's accounts that Japan does not desire the territory as its climate is unsuitable for Japanese colonization, are not seriously taken. It's soil is rich; its mineral resources large; its labor supply cheap and adequate, and Japan is well known to have desired it for a generation as a source of raw material for her factories if not as an overflow field for her surplus population.....

Parent Aids Plentiful In U.S.A.

Throughout the United States there are many service agencies which publish highly authoritative pamphlets and other material of great interest to parents. Much of the material is free; for some there is a nominal charge to cover all or part of the cost of printing and distribution. A postcard to any or all of them should bring to those interested the materials which are free and a statement of how others might be had. Study groups will be particularly interested. ALL of US

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Women Are the True Believers. Men Pretend. Women Know! Women may fuss. Women may complain. Women may go to pieces and cry and cry and cry. But women are the True Believers. They may lose hope and lose control of faith and joy, but life goes back into their hearts again, and they wipe their streaming eyes. They go down into the depths. They wander in dark caverns unknown to men, and they seem forever lost. But they find a gleam of light, shining down to them through a tiny crevice in the rocks, and they follow that gleam and they climb upwards again—and come into the sunlight as calm and as demurely joyous as if they had been picking flowers in a sweet green meadow. Somehow, they are the True Believers.

I don't know why, but they are. Men aren't like that. A man thinks it all over, or, at least, he thinks he thinks. He decides that all is lost for him, that he is defeated, that his high hopes are blocked, and that the black clouds are gathering around his head, and the poison of despair seeps into the hinders of his heart..... What can a man do when fate or his own weakness stand in the way? Why be gloomy, or angry. Bow his head and trudge! Enroll! Grit his teeth! Be tough! Stick it out! Follow the grim logic of his cynical decisions. Be a disappointed man to the grave..... Stubborn wight, that's a man.

But a woman is not like that. All she seeks is a clue, just a shred of a chance to be hopeful again and to believe in life. She is the True Believer..... She may not know why she is that. Nobody knows. It may be because she is the one who brings children into the world and sends the human race onward into the veiled future. She feels a personal obligation, and she is the responsible one. A man may groan and give up and be fretful all his days, but a woman cannot afford such extravagances. She must make a little do, and must make both ends of life meet in a gracious certainty that, some time, somehow, all will be well with the Children of Men.

That's what a woman is. A True Believer. And that's why, sometimes, a man sees a woman for being what she is.

Breakfast For Reducer Is Hearty

By LOGAN CLENDENIN, M. D.

The fundamental principles of a sane reducing diet, we said yesterday, were:
1. System; 2. balance; 3. measurement. So let us start with breakfast.

Half a Cantaloupe
Prepared Egg on Whole Wheat Toast
One pat of Butter
One glass of Toast
Glass of Milk
"Why, that's a good breakfast," you say, "enough for anybody. More than I usually eat."
But wait a minute. Let us remember Number 3, measurement. How much of each of these? And another thing, let us remember system. This is breakfast and there is to be nothing between now and lunch—no sampling of crackers. And only breakfast, lunch and supper. No candy at 4 p. m. No midnight lunch before going to bed—"So I can sleep."

If you are going to reduce sanely you must know the amounts of your food portions. The best way, of course, is by weighing on scales. But you can measure the dimensions of food portions and come pretty close. The Detroit Dairy and Food Council (1901 Stephenson building), publish an interesting series of colored pictures of food portions, actual size, which can be laid out for reducing diets. diabetic diets, etc., and give an accurate idea of the size, weight and measurement of each article. This breakfast is taken from their list.

The half cantaloupe is four inches in diameter. It weighs 130 grams, or 4½ ounces. It has 33 calories. It contains 8-10 grams of protein, no fat, 7½ grams of carbohydrate, small amounts of calcium, phosphorus and iron, and vitamins A, B and C. On the basis of acid-alkaline balance it has 9.7-10 excess on the alkaline side. Its roughage value is 2.1-10 grams of fibre.

The poached egg weighs 59 grams, the toast 30 (both together 89 grams). Measurements, 3½ by 3½ by ½ an inch, 148 calories. Protein, 9.6-10 grams; fat, 5½ grams; carbohydrate, 14.9-10 grams; calcium, sulphur, phosphorus and iron; vitamins A and B; excess acid, 7.7-10; one-half gram of fibre.

Milk: One glass, 7 ounces, or 200 grams; 138 calories; protein, 6.6-10 grams; fat, 8 grams; carbohydrate, 10.1-10 grams; calcium, phosphorus and iron. If raw it contains vitamins A and B and C; if pasteurized, A and B with possibly some C and D. Excess alkalinity, 3.6-10.

Butter: 10 grams, or 1-3 ounces; square 1¼ by 1¼ by 1-3 inch; 77 calories; protein, 1-10 gram; fat, 8½ grams; small quantities of calcium, iron and phosphorus; vitamin A. Neutral in reaction.

Small slice of toast: 3½ by 3½ by ¼ inch. Weight, 15 grams, or ½ ounce; 40 calories; protein, 1½ grams; carbohydrate, 7.7-10 grams; excess acid, 1.

Total calories for breakfast: 471. Balance: Protein, 19.3-10 grams; fat, 22 grams; carbohydrate, 48 grams.

All vitamins present. Minerals present, especially the important ones, calcium, phosphorus and iron. Fibre or bulk present.

Hubby Is Chronic Philanderer

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been married 15 years and my husband has been a philanderer all these years.

"I suffer mental torture when I find he has been having another affair, and still I can't give him up. He is mean and petty when he takes us out, which is about once every two weeks, but when he is out with others I know he is liberal.

"What shall I do? I no sooner break him off with one than he is on with another. I have been away from him twice and he has always sought my company. For the sake of my child I have returned.

"I am very suspicious, and at times probably have accused him of wrong doing without cause. But he has made me do so. I simply cannot trust him. Still I feel that I love him, or can it be love? He has a good position and if it were found out that he does not lead a moral life I'm sure it would mean his disgrace and perhaps loss of position.

If you still love your husband after 15 years of mental torture because of his philandering, you probably can go on, H. L."

There are men who seem constitutionally unable to keep from having these affairs with women. Other men drink or are chronic liars. Some realize that these affairs are of a passing character, and their need and love of their man and knowledge of his fundamental need of them, makes them stick, in spite of the anguish and humiliation to which they are subjected.

If you are one of these women there is no use my telling you to divorce your husband. You would be miserable away from him and feel that your life had been ruined because you care so deeply.

If, however, you feel you could reconstruct your life alone and be happy without suffering as you do now from his affairs, there is no reason why you should stay with a man who has demonstrated his inability to be true.

Possibly your unfounded accusations make him feel that as "he has the name, he will have the game."

WORRIED MARIE: It is pretty hard to break up these young friendships, Marie. They usually have to wear themselves out.

Don't worry too much about your little sister going with this girl who has a bad reputation. If you could and say things against her friend your sister will naturally stand up for her. Invite girls and boys you do approve of to the house, and plan things for her so that she is thrown with a desirable class of young people. Maybe after awhile she will see the contrast between them and this other girl.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I guess 'Bill,' whose letter appeared in a recent issue of your paper wasn't taking any chances that his pursuing lady friend would miss seeing his appeal, for I received a copy of the paper of that date.

"At first I thought I was meant for THE GIRL, but she was described as a young girl, so that eliminated me. In the drama of real life, Virginia, you probably wouldn't call me such a poor sport.

"Bill needn't worry about hurting my feelings. I think, Miss Lee, that the sporting proposition between boys and girls is very equally divided. So often we don't know both sides, and it is difficult to express an unbiased opinion when we know only one.

"I love Bill well enough that I can do without him. I hope his best girl will always be fine.

"M. C."

If you really are the "pursuing lady" mentioned in Bill's letter, my dear M. C., my hat is off to you as a fine sport. Not one word of real proof for the very broad hint Bill—or someone who thought they were working in his interest—of their own—gave you.

Rage Will Burn Up Fat

By GLADYS GLAD

According to the recent statement of a group of our scientists, there's nothing like a series of good, lusty outbursts of rage for reducing excess weight. The emotion of anger and fear, it seems, both burn up fat. And a tantrum or two a day helps to keep those plump curves at bay.

However, I don't believe that I'd advise any girl to get into the habit of losing her temper merely in order to lose weight. Her fits of temper may indeed burn up her excess fat. But they'll probably also burn up her associates. And what's more, fear and anger are two emotions that have the mean habit of etching most unattractive lines and wrinkles on the face.

There's no percentage in attempting to acquire figure beauty at the sacrifice of facial loveliness. And a wan, disheveled look certainly adds beauty to a female's face. But there are a number of women who complain that when they attempt to reduce their faces always become thin, haggard and wrinkled.

It is not necessary to sacrifice the soft, youthful contours of the face when trying to lose weight. But the reducing method employed must be a good one. A well-balanced, reduced face is a face that is not only beautiful but also healthy. One outlined in good lines has the time to adjust itself to the changes of contour when the fat is changed too quickly. And so it is in wrinkled loveliness.

If you wish to preserve the youthful contours of your face at the sacrifice of facial loveliness, let us see what we can do for you.

One tablespoon lemon juice, few grains salt. Soften gelatin with boiling water, adding sugar and stirring until both are dissolved. Stir into pineapple and cucumber and add remaining ingredients. Turn a small amount of the jelly into molds which have been greased or rinsed with cold water. Allow this to partially congeal. Has Xenia Central High a football following? Is night football destined to prove popular with local fans?

The answer to both of these questions is decidedly in the affirmative.

It was conservatively estimated that more than 800 persons, unimpaired of the driving rain that swept Cox Athletic Field preceding and during the first half of the Xenia-Washington C. H. game Friday night, viewed the damp proceedings.

Gate receipts totaled $342, according to a report of O. B. Bogart, faculty manager of athletics, the revenue being greater than that derived from any daylight high school football contest played here in many years.

Imagine how great the attendance would have been could the first night football game here have been attended by more propitious weather conditions. Receipts would have been at least twice and perhaps three times as great.

The receipts included $145 from the sale of season tickets and $45.25 from the disposal of 200 student tickets to Washington C. H. students at 25 cents each.

Favored by more auspicious weather, it is freely predicted that an all-time attendance record should be established two weeks hence when Xenia Central plays its next home game at night. Wilmington High will be the Bucanier gridiron foe Friday, October 9, and the fans will turn out in large numbers. Of that there is little doubt.

For the first time in recent years, Xenia has inaugurated a football season with a victory. The margin over Washington was only 2 to 0, the two eleven being about evenly matched on the muddy gridiron, but then the Bucs deserved to win that game. The Blue Lions recovered their share of fun, but they did not have a single scoring chance. Howard Thompson, with his long and accurate punting, kept the play almost continually deep in Washington territory. Xenia made its own breaks by charging through twice and blocking kicks. The Bucs were deprived of a touchdown when an untimely penalty ruined this prospect. The playing conditions were too terrible for either team to show to advantage, and what the verdict would have been, had the field been dry, is problematical.

Notwithstanding the trying conditions, the Bucs revealed a determined and aggressive spirit. The line charged like it meant it, the tackling was not so much of the pants-slapping school and the team served notice it will be strong defensively.

While the kicking of Thompson was the most noteworthy feature (one of his boots traveling sixty yards across the goal line) individual performance of a few other players commanded special attention.

Carl Smith, center, handled the wet ball like it was dry as the Sahara. His passes to the Bucanier backs were almost unerring in their accuracy. Andy Frazer and Everett Hall, the big tackles, charged and tackled like nobody's business, and Andy, besides these ordinary duties, made a hobby of running around, looking for and covering stray fumbles. "Mysterious Mo" Hyman revealed himself as a thoroughly capable end. Dick Creamer, m'nutive quarterback, ran back punts like he was an old hand at the racket. Freddie Dalton backed up the line well and tackled fiercely, while Bill Wagner indicated, that if given a dry field, he will gain plenty of yardage this fall for dear old Xenia.

The Bucs emerged from the mud and water in much better physical shape than the Blue Lions, most of whom went around afterward limping and nursing minor injuries.

The triumph, meager as it was, broke the spell Washington has exerted over Xenia for the last three seasons. Xenia now has won ten games, lost eleven and tied one with Washington teams since 1911.

MERCHANTS DEFEAT OSBORN IN HITTING CONTEST ON SUNDAY

Xenia Nine Survives In County Tourney; Score Is 14 to 12

Xenia Merchants won their way into the finals of the Greene County baseball elimination series by outlasting the Osborn Fulton Fords to win, 14 to 12, in a slugging bee at Washington Park Sunday afternoon.

The series finals will begin next Sunday with the Yellow Springs Athletics facing the Merchants on the local diamond. A three-game series will be played.

With every player hitting safely at least once, and all but one obtaining two or more safe drives, the Merchants collected a grand total of twenty-three hits off two Osborn pitchers. Osborn made only eight hits, but seven errors and six bases on balls issued by "Cherokee Joe" Lamb, Xenia hurler, aided the cause of the visitors. Wantz and Eber did the flinging for Osborn.

Durnbaugh and "Jug" Conley divided batting honors for Xenia, each getting four singles. The Merchants executed two snappy double plays. Sipe and Glosser each contributed two hits for Osborn.

The contest, one of the most dreamy affairs of the season, took more than two and one-half hours to complete and was replete with arguments, good bad and mediocre baseball. Xenia scored in every inning but three, and Osborn tallied runs in the last seven innings. The Merchants were never behind, however.

The triumph was Xenia's second over Osborn in the current series. The previous victory was by a score of 3 to 1.

SPYING ON SPORTS

BY WILLIAM RITT

Central Press Sports Editor

Horace Greely, late editor who was so free with his advice, might have changed one word in that quip of his: "Go west, young man," and still have rated as an A-1 dispenser of lucrative tips.

Horace could have said "old man" instead of young and he could have given his advice to Connie Mack. Anyway, Connie went west three times this year, and as a result, has his third straight American League title sewed up tight.

It was in the west this year that Connie reaped his reward. The east did his best to give the Athletics a nice berth around third or fourth place, but the west bent the humble knee and acclaimed Connie king.

Here are the figures:

Against eastern opposition (New York, Washington and Boston) the Mackmen have won thirty-five games and lost twenty-five. This is a percentage of .583.

Against western opposition (Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis) the Athletics have won sixty-two and lost but seventeen. That's a percentage of .783.

Against eastern opposition the A's did not do quite as well as winning two out of the three games, but playing the west the Philadelphia club did better than three out of four.

To add to the luck of the A's was the manner in which these same western clubs played against Washington and New York. Connie's most feared pennant rivals.

Though bowing in abject humility to the might of the Mackmen the Indians rough housed Washington, coping two out of three games whenever these teams met.

The Cleveland club has won two more games from the New Yorks than the Yankees have been able to win from them.

Detroit, able to win but three games from the A's, slapped the Senators six times and the Yankees eight times. Chicago, also gaining but three decisions against Philadelphia has taken seven from Washington and four from New York.

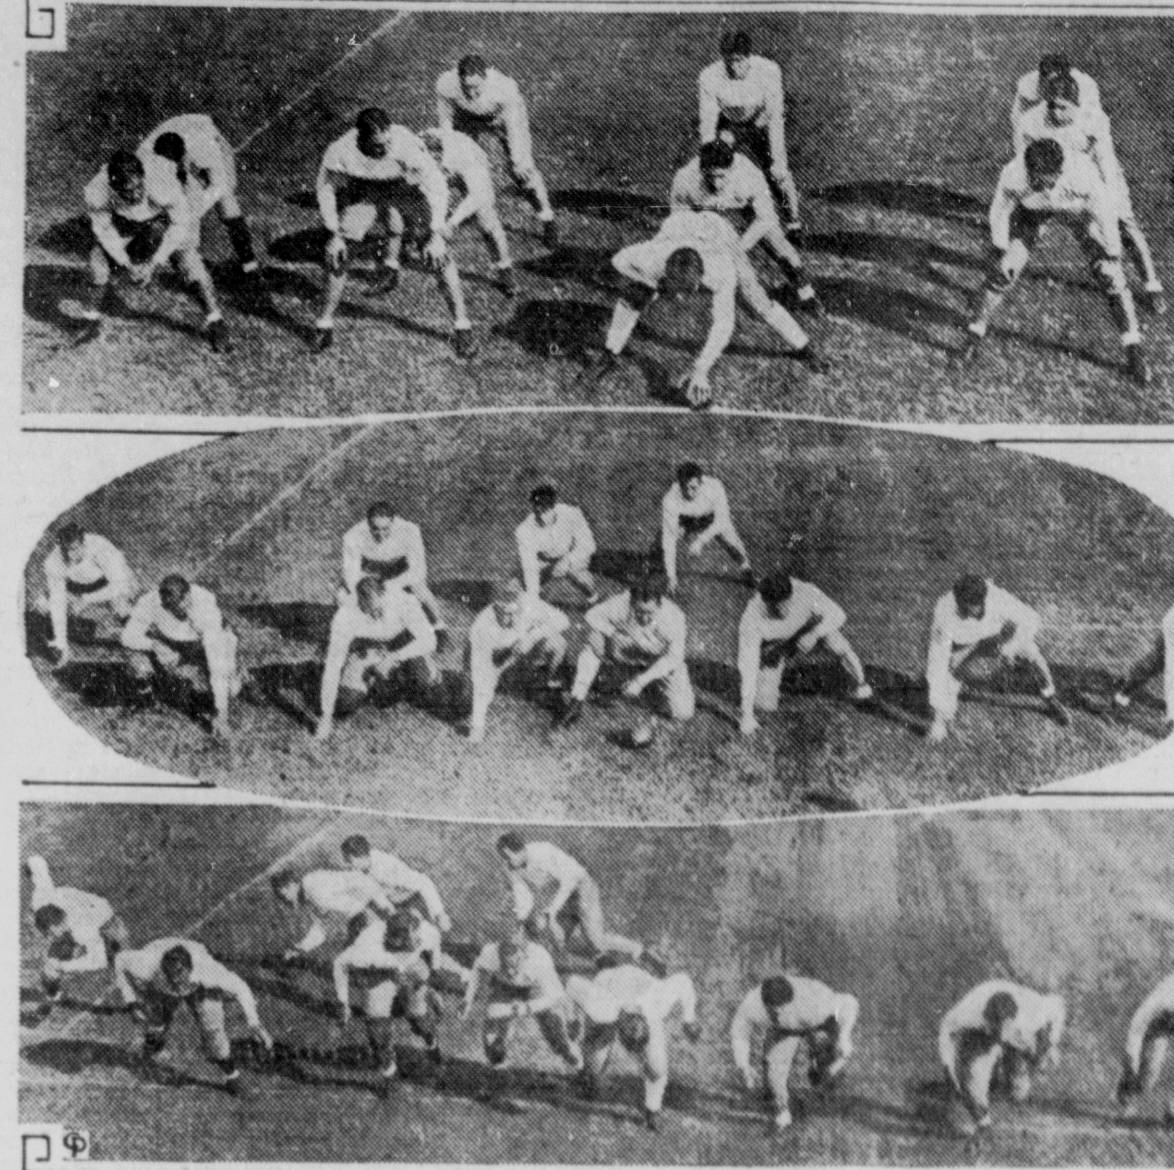

The case of the Cardinals in the National League somewhat resembles that of the Athletics—but isn't such a drastic picture of weakness in the west.

St. Louis has been able to break a little better than even against New York, Brooklyn and Boston, but has swamped the Phillies.

However, Pittsburgh alone in the west has been able to give the Cards anything resembling an even fight. Chicago shows a six-game deficit with the Cards, Cincinnati has been able to win but two of her seventeen games with the champions.

St. Louis has won forty-three games and lost but twenty against the west. That's playing .682 baseball. The east has given the Cardinals forty-seven wins and twenty-nine licks. That's .632.

LOOKOUT FOR ILLINOIS; BOB ZUPPKE OFFERS NO COMPLAINTS

By LEO FISCHER
International News Service Sports Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 28.—When Bob Zuppke says he hasn't any complaints to name, it's time for big ten schools to look out.

With a smile as big as some of his new lineups, the "Little Giant" is going about the task of preparing his nineteenth Illinois football team, which without question, will be the "dark horse" of 1931. Things are looking up around here, and anyone inclined to feel that Illinois will again be a doormat for the big ten, is far away from the truth.

After a couple of mighty lean years, the Illini are now sitting in the golden seat. Few have "doped" the Orange and Blue to cut much of a figure in the year's race, but Zuppke's aggregation is in the spot to wreck the whole parade.

Believe it or not, but the Coach himself doesn't know all his 1931 regulars yet by name. Nine, or possibly even ten, will be new men—recruits from last year's freshman squad. Before it's over, there is a big possibility that all eleven regulars will be from the sophomore ranks.

Illinois is the mystery team of the race. It may not win all its games, but it will win a good share of them, and if the sophomores come through as expected, the eleven will be in the thick of the title fight all the way.

Zuppke has a way with all-sophomore teams. The last time he had such an aggregation to work with, he steered them into two successive big ten titles. This was in 1927 and 1928. In 1929 he came within a game of making it three in a row. The most of the men departed and the hard times came on. Now it's his turn to get back into the sun once more, and if you could see the happy smile with which Zuppke surveys his squad, you'd believe him when he says that he's really happy with such a fine bunch of men.

Zuppke's "happiness" begins when he looks over his new line candidates his first stringers will average close to 190 pounds—something he hasn't had since the days of Crane, Gordon, Weitz, Nowack, et al. Only at the end are his veterans being given consideration, and this mere because "Red" Owen and Mark Swanson have had a bit more experience.

Zuppke's switch to the sophomores means that he's willing to gamble. He hasn't much to lose, for last year's varsity, with the few exceptions already cited, were almost a total loss, and wouldn't be much better this year, as a result, this is about the way the Illinois "dark horse" will take the field Oct. 2 in their opener with St. Louis University.

Swanson (173) and Schustek (182), end; Huhn (192) and Glick (207), tackles; Jensen (175), or Pratt (190), and Gorenstein (208), guards; Straw (170), center; Horley (150), quarterback; Berry (173), Greer (20), halfbacks; Cook (200), fullback.

Few of these names sound familiar right now, but before November 21st, you'll have heard plenty about them.

Wearing full regalia, 2000 Klansmen paraded yesterday to a local high school, where they discussed their three-year program, which they hope to bring about by legislation.

HOME CADETS SCORE VICTORY IN OPENER WITH SHARONVILLE

Captain Yowell Leads
Mates To Triumph
By 19 To 6 Count

Scoring two of the three touchdowns, one on a seventy-yard jaunt after intercepting a pass in the fourth period, Warren Yowell, cadet quarterback and captain, personally conducted the O. S. and S. O. Home football eleven to a 19 to 6 victory over Sharonville High School in the season's opener on the Home gridiron Saturday afternoon.

Yowell plunged through center for the first score in the second quarter. Wolfe missed the try for extra point.

In the third quarter a punt blocked by Rowe, right guard, gave the cadet gridder the ball on Sharonville's nineteen-yard stripe, and Halfback Blair juggled the pigskin over for another touchdown soon afterward. He received a pass for the extra point.

A forward passing attack paved the way for the visiting team's lone touchdown in the last five minutes of play. Elix, end, caught an aerial and stepped over the goal line. Try for point failed. Sharonville renewed its overhead offense in the closing moments, hoping to tie the score, but one of the heavens went awry and was intercepted by Captain Yowell, who sprinted three quarters of the length of the field for a third touchdown.

Passes netted the visitors 107 yards and accounted for their four first downs. The cadets recorded eight first downs and their total yardage was much greater than their opponents.

The cadets will entertain Bath Twp. High's eleven from Osborn next Friday afternoon. Lineups and summary:

AFFECTS CHILDREN'S CHOICE OF Vocation

Ohio's future farmers are being recruited largely from farm families that have had more than average success in agriculture. A study made by P. G. Beck of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the Ohio Experiment Station, of 1275 rural families, indicates that the group of families which had the largest business had almost three times as many of their male children in agriculture as the group of families with the smallest farm business.

Farm reader girls who become farmers' wives were most frequently girls who had a number of younger brothers and sisters. They were the girls who had served the longest apprenticeship on the home farm, assisting their mothers with the farm household duties and in the care of the younger children.

Thus, a selective process appears to be in operation, the children with the most training and experience in successful farming and homemaking tending to remain in agriculture more frequently than those with less experience and training.

TIME OF PICKING DELICIOUS AND STAYMAN

The time of picking delicious and Stayman apples is of very great practical importance. F. S. Howlett, associate in Horticulture at the Ohio Experiment Station, makes the following suggestions as to time of picking these varieties.

It is very desirable that delicious fruits develop high color and high sugar content if high quality is to be obtained. Good quality is impossible if the fruits are picked in an immature condition. However, delicious fruits have a tendency to water core if left on the tree too long. Although a small amount of water core will usually disappear later, any considerable amount is very undesirable and indicates that the fruits are over-mature. The ground color of the fruit at picking time should be a greenish yellow. At this time the fruit will separate readily from the spurs.

Fruits of Delicious should be placed in cold storage at once if long keeping quality is to be assured, as this variety softens and becomes mealy with extreme rapidity at the high temperatures rather common during harvesting time. In common storages in which Delicious are being kept every effort should be made to run the storage very efficiently and carefully so that full advantage is taken of the cool nights.

Stayman Winesap is also a variety upon which high over color and maturity is desirable. Green Stayman Winesap are unattractive, and if placed in cold storage while the ground color is still quite green they will likely scald rather badly. At picking time the ground color should have a pale yellow as green. Even then the fruit must be scald unless oiled paper is used in the containers. The Stayman fruits should pick readily from the spurs and should be of good color. If left on the tree too long considerable water core may develop.

It should be remembered that even a few degrees make a considerable difference in the rate of softening and ripening in a common storage. There are very few common storages where more attention to temperatures inside and out and to proper time of closing and opening the intakes of air will not produce even a few degrees cooler air temperatures within.

The Theater

Motion picture people are orderly folk, according to Charles C. Blair, chief of police in Beverly Hills, where many of the screen celebrities have their homes.

As for wild parties, it is a rare occasion, he says, when the police have to call anyone and ask them to quiet down. More often a couple of dress suit officers are sent up to guard the party against possible hold-up. If the gathering is a large one, other patrolmen are assigned to watch the grounds.

Beverly Hills probably is the most strictly policed town in the world. Its four square miles are guarded by forty officers, working in three eight-hour shifts. They have any given spot in their beat.

Marie Dressler has shown such rapid improvement during the last week that her doctor is allowing her to make a three-weeks trip to New York. Claire Du Brey, who has been the star's faithful companion during her illness, will be her traveling companion. Three producers are after Gilbert Roland since he got a job as Jane Cow's leading man in "Camille." Incidentally Miss Cow is requiring that a special Pullman be put on the Daylight Limited from San Francisco so that she can have a drawing room. Edward Everett Horton is back in Hollywood after a six weeks vacation at Lake George, in New York. Carole Lombard was back at the Studio last week for the first time in three months. Her physician allowed her to take a test but insists she must stay in bed from sixteen to eighteen hours out of every twenty-four.

While at the Pennsylvania depot, Harry Marshall, employed there as a clerk, met with an injury when a heavy truck injured the heel, also tearing the tendons in the instep of his right foot.

Mr. T. Dales Kyle went to Columbus to attend the Grand Circuit races.

Mr. Joseph Santmyer left for a week's trip to West Virginia on business.

once an hour. And if a film star is going out of town, the officers make a circle of the premises, trying windows and doors to see that no intruders have entered.

To cut down the number of solicitors bothering the stars, Chief Blair requires all house-to-house salesmen to get police permits. When they make application, they also have to undergo fingerprinting. Ten days are then allowed to see if the applicant has a criminal record. On a number of occasions this has proven to be the case. Chief Blair believes many daylight burglaries have been prevented by this precaution.

Another service given the stars is the hiring of watchmen. Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Jack Warner and many other film people engage private watchmen through the police department. Blair says a loiterer can't stop in one place ten minutes without being questioned by a policeman.

After a quite summer Tony Bushnell is engaged to play in Pola Negri's new picture, "A Woman Commands." This tall English husband of Zelma O'Neal is well liked around the film colony and is one of its best golfers. He and Zelma have taken Charles Farrell's house in Toluca Lake since Charlie moved in with Virginia Reginald Owen also is in the Negri picture.

ton said, are in favor of prohibition, but have been inarticulate or have been steam-rolled by their leaders.

"It is self-evident," he said, "that the action taken by the legion delegates is not representative of the whole body of Legionnaires, but was rather practically the expression of merely personal opinion by a small percentage of those who who were mustered into the service. The great body of these ex-soldiers who have not found opportunity for expression will be reached by special endeavors by these (dry) organizations which are fighting today's battle against alcoholism and against the liquor enemies of the constitution."

Similarly, he said, special campaigns will be directed toward the hundreds of thousands of members of labor unions whose support of prohibition is being ignored by professional labor leaders.

And as for the legal and medical associations, Cherrington asserted: "The lawyers of the country who support the 18th amendment will be especially appealed to under a practical plan which will enable these sworn officers of the courts to regard seriously their oaths to support the constitution."

"Members of the medical fraternity will be given special attention in the plans for the 1932 campaign. The fact that a majority of the physicians of the country do not avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain permits for the medical use of liquor is one of the most significant indications of the attitude of the medical profession toward the question of intoxicating beverages."

Although the American Legion was not singled out above the bar association, medical association, and the federation of labor, it was the Legion's action that spurred the drys into action.

The drys, as do others, recognize that the Legion is politically the most powerful influence operating around the halls of congress, as evidenced by the almost complete sweep which the Legion has made of its program since the war. Even presidential vetoes have been over-ruled with impunity at a nod from Legion leaders.

With the ex-soldiers coming along in step with the doctors, the lawyers, and organized labor in the country, the allied dry leaders believe the time has come when something must be done.

MAN FROZEN "DEAD" TELLS EXPERIENCE WITH COLD WEATHER

WHEATON, Ill., Sept. 28.—The late Sir Reginald Rankin, credited with having been "frozen into unconsciousness and recovered," has at least one equal in this world, Olenus Olson, a merchant-tailor here.

Sir Reginald who died Sept. 10 at Brynwgwan, England, only recovered from one "death" while the Wheaton man has two to his credit.

Olson's second experience with death was during the winter of 1880 when he was 18. At that time he started out with a party from his farm home in Wernand province, Sweden, to Christiania, Norway, to sell some farm products.

The temperature dropped to thirty degrees below zero, and the members of the party were forced to walk in order to keep from freezing to death, according to Olson. In recalling this "death" Olson said that the last he remembered was that he clung to the sled thinking it an awful dream but believing that he would wake up beside a warm fire.

The next morning he regained consciousness beside a warm fire. His companions were cutting his frozen clothing from his body and he was stiff as a board. Olson recalls how his companions rubbed him with snow and how his body ached every time he was touched. Olson said he recovered without losing a finger or toe two months after his "death."

The first "death" was three years before when he was pulled from a lake and revived by artificial respiration.

STATE DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION SPEAKS ON OSBORN PROGRAM

Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education, delivered the principal address when the $180,000 new addition to the Bath Twp. consolidated school building was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies at Osborn Sunday afternoon.

The program began with an orchestra prelude by the high school orchestra under the direction of Harry Smith, director. A Masonic chorus offered several numbers and brief talks were given by George Walker, of the firm of Walker and Norwick, Dayton architects for the building; H. R. Armstrong, president of the township school board; George Warner, representing the P. T. A., and the Rev. J. W. Young, of the Osborn-Fairfield Rotary Club. The school building was thrown open for public inspection between 1 and 6 p. m.

The school building now contains forty-one rooms for class instruction. The school will accommodate 1,500 pupils, and fifty teachers. At present there are 1,041 pupils enrolled taught by thirty-six teachers. With the expenditure of approximately $180,000 for erection of the new addition last summer, the total cost of the school plant, built six years ago, is placed at $400,000. Two bonds issues financed the construction. R. J. Warner is township school superintendent and H. K. Baker is principal of the high school.

1931 Wonder Year for McPhersons, Entire Family Bowd to Cupid

Aimee Semple McPherson's Marriage, Following Those of Her Two Children and Her Mother, Is Fourth in Famous Evangelist's Family in Less Than Twelve Months.

McKENNEDY and Rev. R. G. HUDSON • Mr. and Mrs. DAVID C. HUTTON • Mr. and Mrs. ROLPH M. PIERSON
The marriage of the famous apostle of Angelus Temple, Aimee Semple McPherson, to her 250-pound voice instructor, David Hutton, whom she had chosen for the role of Pharaoh in her latest religious opera, is the fourth wedding in the noted evangelical family in 1931. The epidemic of marriages began last March with the wedding at Singapore of Roberta, Aimee's daughter, to the 23-year-old pursuer of the inner President Wilson, on which the McPhersons made a world tour. Next came the "surprise marriage" of Aimee's mother, Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, to the Rev. R. G. "What-a-man" Hudson, of New York. The 60-year-old bride and her 50-year-old groom were wed at Lake Sacajawea, Washington. The third member of the family to succumb to the arrow of Cupid was Rolf, Aimee's son by her second marriage. The young scion of the McPhersons married Lorna Dee Smith, a graduate of Angelus Temple Bible School, in July, after several months' engagement. This marriage is Aimee's third venture into matrimony. Her first husband, Robert Semple, died in China, whence he had gone with his young wife to convert the heathen. The second spouse, Harold McPherson, of Providence, R. I., divorced the evangelist after she had refused to give up her preaching and bestow a little of her time on him.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—With the marriage of Aimee Semple McPherson, world-famous evangelist of Angelus Temple, the last of the colorful family of upstarts has succumbed to the machinations of the little god with the bow and arrow, who has hurt up a record of four in the noted clan within a year.

Aimee's latest matrimonial venture marks the third occasion on which she was led to an altar as a bride, but in this case the altar was an airplane. Always a superb show-woman, Mrs. McPherson staged her latest wedding at sunrise in Yuma, Ariz., and immediately the words that made her a bride were spoken took off into the clean atmosphere of heaven.

The evangelist's new husband is David Hutton, her 250-pound voice instructor, whom she had chosen for the role of Pharaoh in her latest religious opera.

Well known in church musical circles both in California and the East, Hutton became interested in Mrs. McPherson's plans to stage Biblical operas in her famous temple. His engagement for one of the roles followed and Aimee lost her heart to his beautiful baritone voice.

Love, unlike measles or mumps, rarely attains epidemic proportions in a family, in an ordinary family, that is; but the McPherson entourage cannot be called ordinary, so we look for exceptions and get them.

The matrimonial epidemic in the Clan McPherson started last March when Roberta Semple, Aimee's daughter by her first marriage, married William Bradley Smyth, at Singapore. Smyth was the pursuer of the inner President Wilson, on which Mrs. McPherson and Roberta made a world tour. Roberta herself is no mean revivalist, as she proved when she preached a fervent sermon to the backward heathens of Chicago, urging gunmen and bootleggers to forsake

DRIVERS OF SCHOOL BUSES ELECT SAME OFFICERS AT MEET

Present officers of the Greene County School Bus Drivers' Association were re-elected at a reorganization meeting Saturday afternoon at the Court House.

Officers are: Superintendent H. C. Aultman, president; C. C. Graf, Bellbrook, vice-president; and Harley Hollingsworth, Caesar Creek Twp., clerk.

Data was gathered on the length of every school bus route in the county, the number of pupils each bus is hauling and the time consumed in transporting them to school.

Drivers revealed themselves as interested in a more equitable form of licensing. They feel that since school buses are only on the roads a short space of time each day it is unjust that the operators should be required to pay license fees equal to those of truck drivers who are possibly operating on a twenty-four-hour-a-day schedule. The bus drivers hope to remedy this apparent inequality if possible.

In order to legalize payments to the bus operators for transportation of the children to school this year the county board of education issued driver's certificates to them. Some form of blanket insurance designed to afford greater protection to school children was also advocated at the meeting.

A majority of the seventy school bus drivers in the county attended the meeting, at which J. B. Rife, member of the county school board, presided in the absence of President Aultman, who was indisposed Saturday.

STILL "EXENIAH" TO SOME FOLKS

IT'S probably too late to do any thing about it now, but pronouncing that name "Xenia" still seems a difficult assignment in some quarters.

The following is from the Cincinnati Enquirer Monday.

A resident of Xenia made a telephone call from Washington, D. C., recently. He reports the following comment by long-distance operator at the Nation's Capital:

"I want Xenia, Ohio, 4-1678. That's 'Zeeniah' and its spelled X-E-N-I-A."

"Thank you. Hold the wire please."

Voice in the distance—the operator's:

"Hello, Columbus—I want 'Exeniah, 4-1678. It's for a guy that knows how to spell it, but doesn't know how to pronounce it."

UPSETS FEATURE OF GOLF TOURNAMENT IN QUARTER-FINALS

With upsets galore featuring the quarter-final matches last week, Millen Davidson, Dr. A. B. Kester, Donald Stutson and Willard Hult advanced to the semi-finals of the annual President's Cup golf tournament at the Xenia Country Club.

Favorites in several instances fell by the wayside as Hult eliminated Robert Currie, 1 up; Dr. Kester defeated Dr. W. T. Ungard, 3 and 2; Stutson beat J. D. Adair, 3 and 1, and Davidson vanquished W. C. Downes, 3 and 2.

The semi-final matches will be played off this week, Davidson facing Dr. Kester and Stutson meeting Hult.

First round matches in the annual "Vice President's Cup" tournament a consolation event for the sixteen golfers who failed to qualify for the President's Cup play, are also in progress at the club. A smaller trophy will be awarded the winner.

WILL GUARD GRAPES

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—With the approach of the grape season, details of police are now stationed in the New York Central railroad yards in the Bronx to prevent racketeers from imposing a tax on the crates before they are loaded. According to assistant attorney Sylvester Ryan, racketeers in past years have exacted approximately $15,000 a month by levying a tax of two cents on every crate. The police will remain in the yards until the season closes in about six weeks.
